SCHOOL NOTES.

Supt. Holliday, Prof. Whiteman and Orville Reasoner were seen bearing arms and proceeding in the direction of the tall uncut Saturday afternoon but there has been no great slump in the price of wild game and we presume the market was not glutted by the efforts of these modern Nimrods. Try it again boys.

There has been no mistake in regard to the diplomas for the class of 1902. Their diplomas have been ready since last summer, and can be had at any time.

The joint institute of Jefferson and Monroe townships will be held here next Saturday.

NEWS.

Protracted meeting at the Friends church has been closed after three weeks of successful revival. The protracted effort is now in progress at the U. B. church and will continue for some time. Revival services will begin at the M. E. church on next Sunday and continue from day to day.

The small break down of the flattening oven at the Grant County county Glass factory has been repaired and every thing is again running smoothly.

There is a movement on foot to rent the rooms over the Golden Eagle for club purposes. The club will endeavor to make a cozy and inviting place for young folks to convene at odd-times and will likely render literary programs for the benefit of its members at stated intervals.

One of Mason Holdens fine black horses was found with a broken leg in the barn Sunday morning and Dr. Van Arsdale was called and dispatched it by one shot. The supposition is that the leg was broken by a kick from the other horse. It is a heavy loss to Mr. Holden as it breaks his match team and another one will be hard to find.

ROYAL FEED MILL.

The Improved Royal Mill No. 2 has friction rings or roller bearings and will grind dry or damp corn and all kinds of small grain. With coarse grinders it will grind from 20 to 30 bushels of course corn and cob meal, about as fine as hominy, or shade finer, when the corn and cob is dry, and 10 to 15 bushels of course corn and cob meal when the corn and cob are damp, per hour. The medium grinders will grind from 15 to 25 bushels of corn and cob meal about like hominy, or a shade finer, per hour when the corn and cob is dry; from 8 to 12 bushels shelled corn and oats, of equal parts, chopped per hour. With fine grinders 10 to 15 bushels of course corn and cob meal, about like hominy or a shade finer, and from 8 to 10 bushels fine corn and cob meal per hour when corn and cob are dry; and from 10 to 15 bushels coarse shelled corn, and 6 to 10 bushels finer, and from 6 to 10 bushels chop feed shelled corn and oats, equal parts. Wheat or rye 5 to 8 bushels, horse making from 4 to 5 circuits per minute, two half bushels of ground feed for a bushel; all small grain to be ground reasonably fine. These estimates for fine grinders are dry grain. Our fine grinders are especially adapted to grinding rye alone, and all small grain.

This mill is guaranteed to give satisfaction.

Snake Catches a Quail. Hunters Shoot Rattler With a Bird in Its Mouth.

A hunting party which went out after quail yesterday returned to the city last night, with a unique trophy in the way of a very large rattlesnake. The huntsmen vouch for a remarkable story in connection with the killing of the snake. They say that the reptile was found with a quail in its mouth.

The party stopped near a field, which seemed to hold good promise of game, and the horse being hitched, the three went out into the woods to hunt for quail. There was only one dog for the party, a pointer, that soon flushed a covey. Dr. Dancy managed to get two on the rise, and he was then attracted by an exclamation made by Mr. Drysdale, who said that he had almost stepped on a snake.

The two together made an investigation and found a big rattler in the very spot in which the birds had risen. The rattler was fired at and killed. In his mouth, the huntsmen say, the snake held a quail, which was still fluttering with life, though the shot had also struck the bird and it soon afterward died.—Florida Times-Union and Citizen.

Mrs. Hildebrandt's Discovery. Lake Sarah, Minn., Nov. 24th.—Mrs. Hildebrandt of this place claims to have discovered a complete cure for Rheumatism and numerous people can testify that as Mrs. Hildebrandt had the terrible affliction and is now a well woman, she appears to have good grounds for her claim. Mrs. Hildebrandt speaks of her cure as follows:

"I had the Rheumatism in my arms so bad that I could not sleep at night. I was induced to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and before I had taken two boxes I was much better. When I had taken four boxes I was completely cured."

It is only fair to state that others have made the same discovery as Mrs. Hildebrandt and that for Rheumatism and other diseases arising from the Kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills are recognized as the one sure and permanent cure.

A Cat's Long Captivity.

Strange noises coming apparently from a supposed solid brick foundation in the northern corner of the new post-office building have been puzzling workers upon the structure for the past six weeks. Yesterday the mystery was solved by the removal of a portion of the foundation and the discovery of a black and white cat secreted in a space barely large enough to permit of the entrance of its body. As a layer of rock was removed the cat leaped out and three workmen who stood about fell back in surprise. For six weeks the cat had been lying in the little space. No one knows upon what it had existed, as the workmen were unable to find any food in the small enclosure.

Day after day peculiar sounds were heard about the foundation stone and workmen had become superstitious, refusing to work about the stone. Finally the foreman decided to clear up the mystery and ordered a huge stone removed. Then the cat, almost starved, leaped out and made its escape.—Chicago News.

Heroic Man to the Rescue. A Harrowing Tale of Misplaced Lingerie and Feminine Ingratitude—How Story Leaked Out Despite All Precautions.

It was all due to the eclipse of the moon that the Business Woman's club had a series of embarrassing scenes, the memory of which causes the members to blush and to repeat their pledges never to breathe a word about what happened, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. The eclipse, a strange young man, and a refractory lock made all the trouble. It was the eclipse that caused the strange young man to ask whether he could look out of the window of the rest room. "I am interested in athletics," he said, boldly, addressing the mild-called matron. "Do you suppose I might be permitted to watch the gymnasium class?"

"Certainly not," responded the matron. "Your request would be an impertinence if I did not know you to be a friend of one of our directors."

"I beg pardon, but no offense was meant," the stranger said, "but I don't see what harm there would be if I looked on at one of the drills."

"Since you make it necessary for me to explain, sir," the matron answered, rolling the "r" on the "s," "the young ladies of this club are not accustomed to appear before gentlemen when they—the young ladies—are dressed in bloomers."

Then she opened the inner door about six inches and squeezed herself through it.

The drill went on for fifteen minutes. Suddenly the inner door was reopened, the matron again squeezed herself through it, and a hand on the other side slammed it. The matron went to a chair near the reading table and pretended she had forgotten there was any one in the room. She was soon called by a pretty girl, whose disheveled pompadour and red stockings had been exhibited before she saw the man. After the girl had screamed, she announced in a stage whisper that the door to the dressing-room corridor would not open. The matron disappeared to return by and by with a meekness of demeanor strangely in contact to her manner when she made the remark about the young ladies' bloomers.

"Do you think you could help me open a door in there?" she asked. "We have all tried, but we cannot move it. The spring lock seems to be caught."

The man offered his services with a disdainful air intended to convey the impression that he did not undervalue his capabilities when skillful aid was needed. He tried the door. It refused to give, even after he had put his shoulder to it. None of the keys on his key ring fitted. He had to acknowledge that he could not render any assistance.

"What can be done?" asked the matron in an agonized voice. "Here are thirty young ladies who cannot go home to-night unless that door is opened. All their street clothes are in their lockers."

Here the teacher, who was accus-

He Handled the First Pair of Corsets Gingerly.

Now and then paleontologists are able to obtain complete skulls, with horn cores attached, of the extinct "long-horned" bison, or buffalo, that roamed over the whole of North America before, during, and at the close of the glacial era, but the United States National Museum is the only institution that is fortunate enough to possess a pair of horns of this animal. They were procured by Professor Dall in his last trip to Alaska in a glacial moraine, where they had lain in ice, snow and freezing water, perfectly preserved, from the day the animal died, centuries ago, in the late quaternary period, to the present. The old "long-horned" buffalo was larger than the modern plains buffalo. The horns are as long as those of an old-time Texas steer.

Never trust any one who cannot win a child's love.

He could hear the girls gathering for consultation. He waited patiently while it was plain all sorts of suggestions were being made.

"I—I might throw the—the things I see here over the transom," the stranger said in a voice which had in it an apologetic infection.

The girls screamed. Some cried "No, no." The matron and the teacher held another conference, while the stranger had plenty of time to wonder how the eclipse was coming on. "I guess you will have to—pass the young ladies' garments out to me," announced the matron. "Be as careful as you can in handling the—the lingerie so it will not get mixed up."

The man rubbed his head and looked around for something breakable.

"I don't see any lingerie," he shouted. "I don't believe I know what you mean."

Several smothered laughs made him angry. He could have sworn at the ingratitude of feminine human nature. He approached the first locker on tiptoe. In a vague way he realized that much depended upon the tact he exercised in making his first selections. Accordingly he made a bundle of one plaid shirt waist, one black jacket, and a pair of shoes. After he had put it through the transom he could hear the girls scramble for the clothing.

"Well done," said the matron encouragingly.

He handed the first pair of corsets gingerly, rolling them up in a lot of cambric he found lying with them. They were received with shocked exclamations. From this time on he worked hard. He discovered that thirty girls had more possessions than 300 men would have under the same circumstances, and some of the articles would have puzzled any man not a proprietor of a department store.

After he had worked for half an hour he became reckless, and as the teacher urged him to make haste, and as not a voice was raised to him in grateful acknowledgement of his knightly offices, he showered knitted things, gloves, stockings, pocket-books, shopping bags, hair bows, shoes, overshoes, petticoats, belts and hairpins upon the assembled company on the other side of the door.

Finally every locker was empty; every dressing-room was cleared. As the man scraped his new clothing against the edges of the transom and heard his coat tear on the two nails that had been driven in for the purposes of steadying a plaque he felt that at least he would have the recompense of being greeted as a hero. He swung himself to the floor.

The gymnasium teacher scowled at him. "You have wrinkled my short skirt by doing it up to look like a football," she said accusingly. "It would have been much better if I had been allowed to go through the transom."

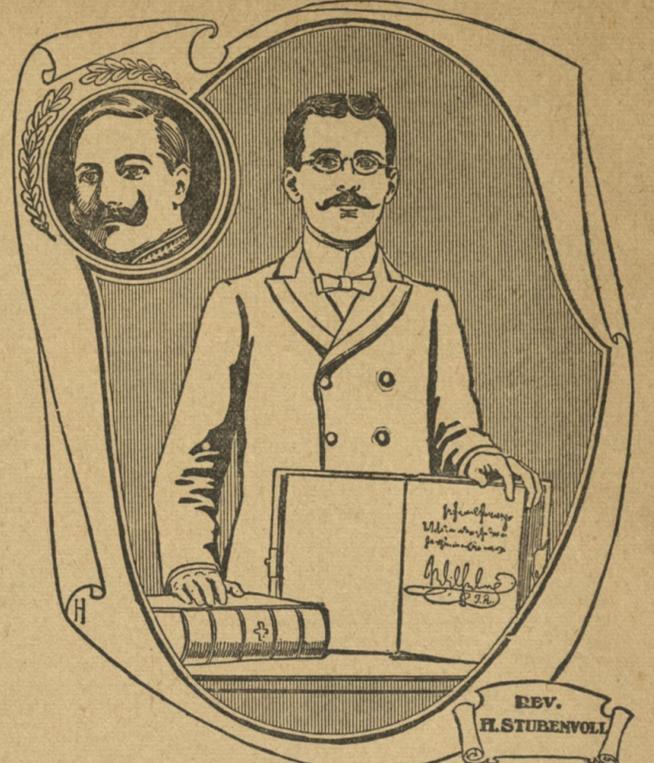

The man made his way to the elevator, where he encountered several of the club members for whom he had played the part of a hero. None appeared to be aware of his existence. As the elevator boy closed the door the matron ran down the hall.

"Remember, we trust to your honor as a gentleman," she said.

And, of course, the man never told. The story has leaked out because the members of the gymnasium class have met daily to trade articles of wearing apparel that became exchanged on the night of the eclipse, and their strange barterings have attracted so much attention that it has proved impossible to keep the secret concerning the eclipse, the strange young man, and the refractory lock.

A PASTOR WHO WAS BEFRIENDED BY AN EMPEROR SAVED BY PE-RU-NA.

Rev. H. Stubenvoll, of Elkhorn, Wis., is pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran St. John's Church of that place. Rev. Stubenvoll is the possessor of two bibles presented to him by Emperor William of Germany. Upon the fly leaf of one of the bibles the Emperor has written in his own handwriting a text.

This honored pastor, in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, says concerning their famous catarrh remedy, Peruna:

Gentlemen: "I had hemorrhages of the lungs for a long time, and all despaired of me. I took Peruna and was cured. It gave me strength and courage, and made healthy, pure blood. It increased my weight, gave me a healthy color, and I feel well. It is the best medicine in the world. If everyone kept Peruna in the house it would save many from death every year."—H. STUBENVOLL.

Thousands of people have catarrh who would be surprised to know it, because it has been called some other name than catarrh. The fact is catarrh is catarrh wherever located; and another fact which is of equally great importance, is that Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

THE BLOOD.
The blood is life. We derive from the blood life, power, beauty and reason, as the doctors have been saying from time immemorial. A healthy body, a fresh appearance, and generally all the abilities we possess depend on that source of life. It is therefore the duty of every sensible man to keep the blood as pure and normal as possible. Nature, in its infinite wisdom, has given us a thermometer indicating the state of the blood, which appeals to our reason by giving notice of its impurity. Small eruptions of the skin, to which we scarcely pay any attention, headache, ringing noises in the ears, lassitude, sleeplessness, are generally a sign that the blood is not in its normal state, but is filled with noxious substances. These symptoms deserve our full attention. If more attention were paid to those symptoms, and steps taken to remove them, then many illnesses from which we suffer would become unknown and the human body would become stronger and healthier. Attention therefore should be paid to those warning signs, and the blood can be purified and poisonous substances removed from it by the use of Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops, discovered more than 60 years ago.

A Good Place.
The youthful offspring of a prominent young lawyer who has a suite of offices in the Lord's Court building, at Exchange place and William street, was called into the parlor the other day to be "showed off" to an admiring visitor as the "brightest ever." The conversation naturally drifted to his father, and the visitor asked the child: "Do you know where your father's offices are?" "Oh, yeth," said the youngster; "they're in heaven."—New York Times.

And still Another Disease.
One of the latest diseases to attract the attention of the faculty is, it seems, mysophobia. A person suffering from this complaint will even go so far as minutely to scrutinize his tumbler for finger marks, examine his serviette to make sure that it has not been used by somebody else, and often even, in advanced cases, wipe every plate put before him with his serviette.

WEALTH IN OLD VERMONT
Relative Value of Possessions Alone Constitute Affluence.
Up along the White river valley, in Vermont, half way between the towns of Bethel and Randolph, at a little bend in the road, is a watering trough almost hidden in the shadows of the trees which form a natural arch for the highway. A Washington newspaper man was driving along there one day, and tells this story of his experience:

"Just after I pulled up my horse at the trough a farmer came along and stopped. 'Mornin', stranger,' he said; 'how be ye?'"
"I be pretty well,' I answered, in the same vernacular.
"Be ye 'quainted round here?'"
"Some,' I answered. (I knew about half the people in each of the towns).
"Well, maybe as how you know Jim Jones' folks?'"
"Yes, I know 'em."
"Know Hen' Slack?" he persisted.
"Yes."
"Ever know Si Rogers?'"
"Yes."
"Know his daughter Sue?'"
"Never met her."
"Sho! Waal, Sue's married now.' (I observed that that was a very happy circumstance.)
"Yes,' he continued, 'Sue's married now. Married a wealthy man. Very wealthy man. Worth much 's hundred dollars.'—Washington Post.

MANY NOBLEMEN IN PRISON.
Aristocracy Well Represented in European Jails.
A Vienna paper states that few people have any idea of the large number of men and women of noble birth undergoing penal servitude on the continent.

It is estimated that Russian prisons alone contain 12,000 aristocrats, while there are several thousand noblemen in the penal establishments of Italy. Two dukes of Notarbartolo are, for instance, at present undergoing penal servitude for life in the Italian prison of La Maddalena for the brutal murder of a young officer whom they had swindled at card playing and who had threatened to denounce them as card sharpers.

Among the convicts in a Belgian prison are Prince Charles de Loos-Cosvarem, who committed a number of gigantic frauds and one crime of violence, and the Marquis of Varela, for the murder of his own mother.

In France there are several hundred titled aristocrats in prison, and though no statistics are available regarding Austria and Germany, the same state of things is said to exist there also.—London Express.

HIS MOST SUCCESSFUL SPEECH
Senator Depew's Neat Compliment to His Better Half.

Regularly, Chauncey M. Depew must submit to a course of questioning for the benefit of some newspaper or magazine article, or for the adornment of the pages of a work on "Successful Americans."

The senator never yawns or seems bored when this trial comes, but always has a welcome for the interviewer.

"Senator, of all your speeches, which one, in your estimation, do you consider the greatest and most effective?" was asked in the course of an interview.

"I have one in mind, but not a copy of it, for the speech has not appeared in print and never will."

"Will you let me have the facts?" exclaimed the now excited interviewer, scenting a scoop.

"Why, yes," said Mr. Depew, his eyes full of mirth, "my greatest and most effective speech, judging from results, was my speech of proposal, delivered some time before my marriage."

The Railway Beautiful.
The work done by our railroads has been of great value because so widely extended. Those who travel are carried in one spot of beauty to another. In some cases the whole line of the road has been improved by planting choice shade trees and ornamental shrubs. One of our Western roads is lined for several hundred miles on both sides with superb chestnuts and evergreens. The removal of the unsightly and the suggestion of cleanliness about the depots has been specially useful. Improvements become a passion. Near such depots cottages are sure to be neat and yards cleanly. This class of improvement necessarily involves the conventional, and that is not always a bad thing in a village. We can enjoy reading the name of a station in clam shells. Color and contrast are perhaps the main thing. A group of handsome shrubbery, of lilacs or weigelas with plenty of roses, cheers the tired traveler and gives him something pleasant to think about.

Black Monday.
The ill repute of Friday as an unlucky day is shown by some recent statistics to be undeserved. A careful investigation, largely through official channels, has been made into the question in Germany, and as a result it is found that of 9,948 weekly accidents and disasters, such as are commonly attributed to bad luck, 1,674 occurred on Monday, 1,551 on Tuesday, 1,631 on Wednesday, 1,547 on Thursday, 1,638 on Friday, 1,638 on Saturday and 269 on Sunday. The most noteworthy features of these figures, apart from their vindication of Friday, is the uniformity of distribution of mishaps among the six secular days of the week, the difference between the most and the least "unlucky" days being less than one-tenth. The day of most disasters is Monday.

PROFITS OF FISH DEALERS.
Would Seem a Good Investment for Your Surplus Capital.

A remarkable statement as to the enormous difference between the prices obtained by fishermen for their catches and those which the public have to pay for fish was given by Mr. L. W. Lyde during a lecture to the members of the Manchester Geographical Society. Mr. Lyde, who is an examiner in and teacher of geography, said that he once had a class of boys who were deeply interested in the question of railway rates for carrying mackerel. He learned afterwards that the reason for this unwelcome attention was that some of the boys' fathers were fishmongers, who had special arrangements with the railway companies in regard to the rates charged to them. He made inquiries into the subject, and found that, while fishermen received £4 17s 6d per ton for mackerel, the railway company charged for its carriage from St. Ives, Cornwall, to London, £5 per ton. Then Mr. Lyde wrote to Billingsgate and inquired from the dealers what was their price for mackerel. The reply was £50 per ton wholesale and £60 a ton retail!

New Dodge in Street Begging.
Ideas count for success, even in street begging. Old tricks become tiresome through familiarity. The mendicant of the present day, if he would live well, must get something new. One of the latest dodges of the New York solicitor of alms is heroic. It first arouses the indignation of the victim, then pacifies him, and finally wins his sympathy and his money. It is worked in this way: A shabbily attired man hurries along the street, apparently unconscious of his surroundings. He expectorates, as though by chance, on to the well polished shoe of a passer-by. Before the man has time to protest the mendicant drops on his knees and, with the remnants of a well-worn handkerchief, rubs away at the soiled shoe, meanwhile pouring forth profuse apologies. Nine times out of ten he gets a dime for his politeness.

Costly Weddings for Guests.
A royal wedding is a very expensive affair, not only for those who give it, but for each guest. The presents necessarily cost the guests a great deal, for only the richest and rarest gifts can be offered to royalty. Besides a gift, each guest must leave a sum of money for every servant and attendant in his host's house. As there are numerous attendants, and each one must receive a "tip" according to his rank, a great deal of money is necessary. At the marriage of the Grand Duke and Duchess of Hess the guests left altogether £1,759 to be distributed, besides bestowing over £1,500 worth of gifts among the servants before their departure.

Capt. Carter's Term Nearly Out.
Former Capt. O. M. Carter, whose military career suddenly terminated in the Fort Leavenworth prison with a five years' sentence against him for financial irregularities growing out of his connection with the river and harbor improvements in Savannah, is due for release from confinement early next year. Prisoners are granted a curtailment of their sentence at the rate of two months each year for good conduct. Former Capt. Carter has been a model prisoner and ten months will be deducted from his term, according to present indications.

Gen. Corbin's Recent Report.
Since the publication of Adjutant General Corbin's report it has come to be known as "the wine, women and song report." It will be remembered that Gen. Corbin discussed the canteen, commented adversely on the tendency of young officers to get married and recommended the instruction of soldiers in music, especially urging that they be taught regimental airs and songs.

Mahomet and the Cat.
Mahomet did not give encouragement to those who ban the cat from the company of honest folk. A cat, it is said, once went to sleep on the sleeve of the prophet's robe. When the hour of prayer arrived Mahomet, so the story goes, cut away his sleeve in order that the cat should be undisturbed.

EXCURSIONS TO THE SOUTH.
The Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad have announced a series of excursions to the South, which should prove popular with the traveling public.

They are so arranged as to best suit the needs of the various classes of travel and in all cases are available for transportation on the daily fast through trains of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois R. R. and its southern connecting lines.

The homeseeker, the colonist and the tourist have all been provided for. The rates vary according to the length of time the traveler wishes to devote to the trip and in all cases liberal stopover privileges are granted.

Detailed information can be obtained on application to nearest C. & E. I. R. R. ticket agent or to W. H. Richardson, Gen'l Passgr. Agt., Chicago, Ill.

There are many excellent magazines but none exactly like "The Pilgrim." You may get a magazine that interests the women and girls, but there is not much in it for the father and brothers. Or, you can get a man's magazine, all politics and business. Or, you can get magazines just for the children. But "The Pilgrim" aims to have something to interest every member of the family.

THE PINKHAM CURES
ATTRACTING GREAT ATTENTION AMONG THINKING WOMEN.

Mrs. Frances Stafford, of 243 E. 114th St., N.Y. City, adds her testimony to the hundreds of thousands on Mrs. Pinkham's files.

When Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies were first introduced skeptics all over the country frowned upon their curative claims, but as year after year has rolled by and the little group of women who had been cured by the new discovery has since grown into a vast army of hundreds of thousands, doubts and skepticisms have been swept away as by a mighty flood, until to-day the great good that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and her other medicines are doing among the women of America is attracting the attention of many of our leading scientists, physicians and thinking people. Merit alone could win such fame; wise, therefore, is the woman who for a cure relies upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

SYRUP OF FIGS

Acts Gently; Acts Pleasantly; Acts Beneficially; Acts truly as a Laxative.

Syrup of Figs appeals to the cultured and the well-informed and to the healthy, because its component parts are simple and wholesome and because it acts without disturbing the natural functions, as it is wholly free from every objectionable quality or substance. In the process of manufacturing figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but the medicinal virtues of Syrup of Figs are obtained from an excellent combination of plants known to be medicinally laxative and to act most beneficially. HAINES WRITES.

We quote from a letter written by F. N. Haines the following:
 H. R. Miles and Mr. Russell arrived here on the morning of the 8 Miles left minus his left arm as a result of to many questions propounded by the Haines family. Tell Jim Peele if he succeeds in getting his crowd, and comes west to not fail to stop at Kalispell. Will leave here Monday to look after some work 65 miles north-west. Have a trip of 20 miles to make on snow shoes. Tell Ace if he gets time he has my consent to write me a letter.

WHENEVER

in Upland call at the New Clothing store next door to the bank.

A few days ago the weather was below zero, yet we had a reasonable supply of gas for domestic use. Probably the best supply of any town in the gas belt. But now, the Mining Co has two wells, and it is now using part of another well. Yet with the helps of this third well, the Mining Co is not now able to supply the Deeren factory with all the gas the factory needs. And it is now certain that the Mining Co cannot supply any factory with gas next winter. Our gas is closing out, and it is the part of wisdom to prepare for it. Patrick Henry said "I wish to know the whole truth, the worst, and to provide for it" That is the voice of intelligent reason.

Some tell us, we should look at the bright side of every thing. That is good as far as it goes. I have often thought that the teaching of the church, in the olden time, had too much grave-yard matter, with too much hell in it, for useful instruction. I love the bright side, with good cheer, but that is not the whole thing. We should not like children look at only the butterfly. But we should look at some of the stern realities of life. So as to be better prepared to meet them, and thus avoid the breakers. If we had looked only at the bright side of our gas supply last fall, we would now suffer for want of gas. The bright side view, will not supply our wants. Some of us must walk in the mud, or all must suffer.

Nature is our great teacher. And nature presents to us a dual condition in every thing. We have light and darkness. Good and bad, hope and fear, joy and sorrow.

Without this presentation of both conditions, and both sides of every thing, we would have no advancement in knowledge. And to learn and teach aright we must learn and teach as nature teaches us.

To teach each other to avoid the errs, or pitfalls of life, is as natural as it is to help each other, in sickness or in other distress. This desire is given us by nature's God for our mutual good. This God given desire finds its fullest and best expression now, in the prohibition party and the W. C. T. U. This desire has caused many to become preachers. It is the voice of God calling through nature, for every prohibitionist to do his duty and his whole duty to keep a live the spirit of our party and increase its numbers.

SLOT MACHINE

Case Still Claims the Attention of Court.

The case of the state of Indiana against B. F. Little for having a slot machine in his place of business was tried by jury last Wednesday evening and he was acquitted. The following jury rendered the verdict: Frank Moon, E. King, Lon Belville, A. P. Snyder, Ed. Gibson and John Johnson. Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Hamilton was on hand for the state and W. L. Reddick appeared for the defuse. The case was before Squire Hicks at the town hall. A motion was made for a new trial by the Deputy Prosecutor and it was argued before Squire Hicks Monday afternoon and the motion was over ruled.
