Afternoon Toilette in "Midnight" Blue

Here is an afternoon toilette in which the graceful gown is made of "midnight" blue taffeta and is worn with a neckpiece of ostrich feathers and crepe. The hat of blue straw is trimmed with velvet ribbon and big, full-bloom garden roses and their deep green foliage. Every detail of this costume is up to date and tasteful—therefore, worth consideration.

The gown shows a skirt having single box plaits joined to a yoke, of easy adjustment to the figure. It is not as short as skirts for tailored gowns, but reaches to the instep. The plaited portion of the skirt is set on to the yoke with a piping of the silk, and the bottom of the skirt is finished with a narrow binding.

The bodice is draped, giving the effect of a sleeveless coatee. All edges and seams are finished with pipings, and there is a widely flaring collar with wings wired to hold its curving outlines. This, and the remarkably attractive sleeves, bestow much of its distinction upon this refined and beautiful design. In truth collars and cuffs appear to be the arbiters of fate for those gowns that aspire to originality this season.

The sleeves are long, with flaring cuffs extending over the hand. Their decoration with small buttons and embroidered arrowpoints (somewhat elaborated) could not be improved upon.

A separate collar and guimpe of fine batiste with narrow silk binding is in line with the season's vogue, but designed especially for the chic gown with which it appears.

The laced boots, with light cloth tops, and the smart millinery, proclaim a costume selected by an expert whose taste was reliable. All are the last words in matters of fashion, but the finished toilette is, nevertheless, quiet and refined.

Varied Waist Lines.

There is a waist line to suit every type—the empire for the slight youthful figure, the natural waist line for the conservatives and straight ones for the stout figure.

Midsummer Millinery Allurements

Two beautiful dress hats emphasize the fact that hats large or small or anywhere between may be chosen by midlady when she centers her attention upon her summer millinery. The matter of size need only be considered in connection with that of becomingness. The little hat still holds its own in a glorious company of newly arrived picturesque wide brimmed allurements that pleasingly distract the attention and divide the honors.

Without doubt the trend is toward the large hat for midsummer. And if a vote might be taken and recorded as to which is the most beautiful of all hats the chances are the big black picture hat would be conceded to be the favorite of womankind—and mankind, too.

A masterpiece in the art of millinery is pictured here in the lovely wide-brimmed hat of black lace and velvet. The crown is a mass of black wheat and big hop blossoms. The silky fibers of the bearded wheat appear like the finest of aigrettes. Their arrangement is unusual and the effect beautiful.

Streamers of wide black velvet ribbon add a final touch of richness to a superb conception.

In the shadow of this splendor the small brilliant turban loses nothing of its charm. To the little hat belongs all sorts of eccentric curves and turns and poises, and its business is not to be dignified.

The model shown is of silk straw in putty color. At the front, pieces of the straw braid are edged with an embroidered band and draped on the frame. Grapes and leaves, simulated in silk in brilliant colors, are posed flat against the hat, and an occasional tendril reaches out from the coronet.

This very clever little model is finished with a long slender feather which soars from the left side with great singleness of purpose to add height, apparently. But it changes its mind and curls downward again, taking advantage of the privilege of the little hat to be eccentric.

MAKE MONEY GROWING THE SMALL FRUITS

Blackberries Respond to Good Cultivation.

(By M. N. EDGERTON.)
It is not within the province of this article to impart to the reader ability to get money by engaging in the culture of small fruits.

It is not within the power of any person to impart to another ability of whatever kind. The ability to meet the condition which brings success must be inherent.

This being true, our purpose, then, in discussing this question, is the elucidation of the principles underlying, and operations connected with the business of growing small fruits, and the creating of an interest and enthusiasm in and for the occupation and work.

To make money growing small fruits, maximum crops must be grown with minimum effort. To be able to do this one must possess a natural aptitude for the business and work, that is to say, one must have a love for nature and also be filled with intense interest and enthusiasm which creates the necessary incentive.

One may be qualified to deal with the problems and work connected with general farming, and still come short of that required in small fruit growing.

There are certain laws now more or less understood which must be conformed to, in our operations connected with soil and plant culture, if we are to obtain maximum rewards for labor bestowed.

Now it may appear to the casual and uninformed observer, that husbandry is a simple occupation requiring little or no education or skill, when in fact, the business has to do with most intricate and wonderful processes in both soil and plant life; and while it may be possible to win a degree of success without a knowledge of these processes and of the laws governing these life forces in nature, much more if the soil is in a condition of acidity (sour), made so by standing water, or because of conditions brought about by wrong handling, then these abnormal conditions must be corrected if uniformity in maximum results is the end sought.

For upon congeniality in soil conditions depends activity in soil life, which in turn determines the degree of productiveness in soils.

Some localities because of their situation, are much subject to late spring frosts. The growing of strawberries, under such conditions is a precarious business.

It is folly to expect uniform maximum results where natural conditions are so adverse to their successful culture.

If one wishes to make a success, and make good money growing small fruits, the first thing that should be done is to make a close study of these problems of local atmospheric conditions and climatic changes and of the laws determining soil activities, and then apply the knowledge thus acquired to the case in hand.

Because of air drainage thus afforded, higher lying lands should be given the preference. Proximity to bodies of water mitigates the evils resulting from frost, preventing, often, the lowering of the temperature to the frost-point.

The question of soil activities is a much more intricate and complicated problem. Activity in soil life is influenced and determined largely by the following named agencies and factors: Soil drainage, soil aeration, humus content, and tillage. Without going into the details, we can only say that in order to give best results a soil should be sufficiently drained, either because of its composition and situation, or through tilling and surface drains, so that no water will stand on certain and substantial success and more uniform results may be had through the possession of this knowledge.

The occupation of fruit growing is a more complicated business even than general farming, for there is a greater number of problems to master.

The sun shines and rain falls on all alike. This statement is to be taken in a general way.

Certain sections of this country have scant rainfall, while other sections have plenty and to spare. Sections of the country may pass through a severe and protracted drought one season and be subject to the other extreme the next, but such conditions are controlled by fixed laws of nature and have nothing whatever to do with chance or luck.

Now, conditions in the laws of nature which determine precipitation may vary with the seasonal changes, but those laws which determine soil-production never.

If a certain soil responds more liberally to our efforts than another, there must be some cause for this difference in productivity, and the cause will usually be found under the control of human agencies.

If a piece of land is low and subject to flooding, then it must be drained to place it on an equal footing with land having natural drainage its surface, or remain in the first 8 or 10 inches of soil more than a few hours after rains have ceased.

Soil aeration is promoted by efficient tillage, both preparation and maintenance, which creates and maintains a loose, friable condition of soil, permitting the circulation of air among soil grains, also by good drainage, for the presence of standing water (not soil moisture), in a soil excludes all air.

Proximity to markets cuts quite a figure in determining profits. One needs to make a special study of the market problem.

The nearer the market the less carriage, and less marketman's profits. A private delivery trade may often be worked up and followed to good advantage. Customers should be charged the full market price, else the grower might better sell wholesale.

Superior quality and freshness in product should be the inducement offered the consumer, not cheaper prices.

I see no reason why skillfulness in fruit growing is not justly entitled to remuneration equal to a like degree of skill applied in any other pursuit.

Anyhow, I am sure that results secured in small fruit growing will always be remunerative in proportion as knowledge is skillfully applied toward

IS MADE A WIFE ON HER DEATHBED

Mother of Nine Is Cleared in Extraordinary Marriage in North Carolina.

ELOPED 20 YEARS AGO

Told Friends They Were Married According to South Carolina Law—Honored and Respected by Their Friends.

Salsbury, N. C.—A most extraordinary death bed marriage was solemnized—that is the word—at Woodleaf, N. C. Usually such marriages take place when one or other of a young and loving pair, who have plighted their troth, is about to pass into the unknown. After such a marriage the one left feels a firmer, if invisible, bond to the one who has departed.

Just before she breathed her last Miss Lucy Litker was married to A. C. Gibbons. Yet in the eyes of the world they had been man and wife for twenty years. Dwelling together happily, nine children had blessed them.

But knowing she had only a short time to live, Mrs. Gibbons yearned to free her soul of its stain, to clear her conscience and, not least, to legitimize her children. Gibbons, weeping and remorseful, instantly complied with her request.

Beginning of Romance.

Gibbons and Miss Litker were sweethearts twenty years ago; he was twenty-five then, she a pretty girl of nineteen. They "eloped" to South Carolina where, in those days, it was not necessary to take out a marriage license. Returning, Gibbons and his "wife," told their relatives and friends they had been married in strict accordance with South Carolina law. Everybody believed them, everybody received them, for the girl was regarded as a model of propriety, the young man was industrious and self-contained. They lived well, and as the years passed educated their children and brought them up to be religious.

Nevertheless Mrs. Gibbons—to call her by the name she longed to bear rightfully—had been in failing health for some months. It became plain that she had tuberculosis of the lungs and soon, that she was doomed. As the disease progressed the thought of her false marriage preyed upon her mind more and more, gnawed her conscience.

Finally she could conceal the secret no longer, and, calling her closest friend, whispered to her:

"Before I go into the presence of my Maker I must make a confession to you. We, my dear husband and I, were never married. I will die happy if he will marry me—if, at last, I am his lawful wife."

"Poor dear," said the friend stroking Mrs. Gibbons' forehead soothingly. "Her mind is wandering. She has been married for twenty years," and the friend told Gibbons, adding, "I'm afraid she will not live until morning."

"Her mind is not wandering," sobbed Gibbons. "She speaks the truth. We were never married. I could not have loved her more if he had been married a thousand times. I could not have tried harder to make her happy. So her wish shall be granted. We will be married at once."

There was need of haste. A messenger was dispatched for a clergyman; two of Gibbons' friends speeded in an automobile to Salsbury and secured a marriage license. As the minister pronounced the last word that made her a wife Mrs. Gibbons smiled happily, circled her husband's neck with her wasted arms and whispered:

"My husband, my own, true husband—at last."

Soon, still smiling, she ceased to breathe.

Bringing Sunshine to the Darkest Day

He Knew Daddy.

The eight-year-old son of a famous lawyer was one day taken by his governess to a court of law in which his father was expected to make a particularly brilliant speech.

"Mother, I heard father make a fine speech today," said the boy on his return home. "And what do you think? Father almost cried, and he made some of the jurymen cry, too!"

"And you, too?" asked his mother.

"Oh, no—he can't get over me!" replied the heir and pride of the family.

How "Sam" Registered.

Not far from Lexington lives a young farmer, "Sam" Woolridge, who found occasion to stop at the Phoenix, in Lexington. Just before Mr. Woolridge registered, James B. Haggin of New York, owner of the beautiful Elmendorf stock farm, walked to the desk and wrote: "James B. Haggin and Valet, New York."

Mr. Woolridge was the next to register, and this is what he wrote: "Sam Woolridge and Valise, Versailles."

JOKE WAS ON INVESTIGATOR

He Had an Idea It Was on Restaurant Proprietor, but It Turned Out Otherwise.

The late Norman B. Ream, the organizer of the steel trust and many other important corporations, once said to a New York reporter about a trust investigation: "Maybe these investigations will have the same luck as the game warden."

"A game warden heard that a restaurant was serving a game out of season. He disguised himself with a false beard, visited the place and ordered a pheasant.

"The pheasant, delicately high like roquefort cheese, as well as all good pheasant should be, was served to the game warden, and he devoured it to the last morsel, at the same time inflicting severe punishment on a bottle of rare old Burgundy—for the state, of course, paid for it all.

"At the end of his repast the game warden summoned the proprietor and said:

"I arrest you, sir, in the name of the law!"

"The proprietor's mouth opened in astonishment. He swallowed two or three times, then he gasped:

"Wh—what for?"

"For serving me a pheasant out of season," said the game warden.

"A look of relief appeared on the proprietor's face.

"Oh," he said, "that wasn't pheasant. It was crow."

Her Patience Wearing Out.

Little Lola had been censured for some mischief she had been engaged in. After thinking it over for some time she exclaimed: "Oh, I do wish I had a baby brother!"

"Why do you wish that?"

"Cause," she replied, "this thing of being scolded for everything that happens around this house makes me tired."

MOTHERS' DAY

Mothers' Day was very fittingly observed in Upland, and appropriate services were held in nearly all of the churches. "No tongue can tell a mother's love—no pen can transcribe it; no brush can trace it on the canvas and no instrument can measure it. It is such a sacred thing—so beautiful—and each test that has come has shown how limitless is the affection of motherhood. No man has ever fallen so low while his mother lived who did not know that while her heart might break over his misconduct, she would find some excuse for him and would continue to love him and defend him with her life. Step by step man has fallen until he has reached the depths, yet step by step the mother's love has followed him and hoped that some change might come. And what greater hell can come to a man than the tardy realization that mother is dead and he was a contributor to her earthly sorrows and uncertainties?"

Perhaps half of our readers have been spared the sorrow that comes with the loss of mother. Perhaps half you still find opportunity to see much of the sweet woman who brought you into the world. To those fortunate ones we offer this bit of advice, while we touch upon a subject, "Tell Mother!" Tell her the very thing you dislike most for her to know. For if you can't "tell mother," you are pursuing a barren idealism, you are doing something that will not stand the acid test. Let that be your proof right or wrong, if you are in doubt. "Tell Mother!" For mother understands—mother knows. Mother isn't as old-fashioned as you think she is. She has so much love in her heart that she keeps up with you. She knows what is best. If you can't "tell mother," young lady, you are on the wrong track. If you are ashamed for mother to know, you are ashamed of yourself—down in your heart. If you are keeping something from mother, you are spotting your character with splotches that will sink in and in. And this advice is not wholly for girls and women. It is as well for the boys and men. If you are ashamed to let mother know, there isn't any question about it, you are on the wrong track, and you will find there will be blots upon your character that should not be there. It is a guide for all who still have a mother—"tell" her!"
