A Season of Change

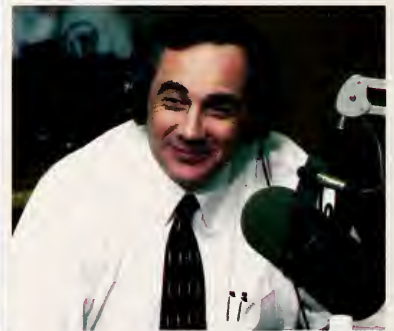

Nancy and I are Midwest natives and as a result have always enjoyed the changing of the seasons. The Scriptures are full of analogies and metaphors celebrating God's creation calendar. There are lessons to be learned, opportunities to be embraced and obligations to fulfill as life's journey unfolds. Our God is the Heavenly Father who delights in equipping His children to serve Him at each stage of life so that His purposes can be realized upon the earth.

As Nancy and I start a new season in our calling it is difficult to leave behind the places and experiences that now mean so much to us. There are so many "ebenezers" as we reflect on our years here at Taylor. God has accomplished so much among us in keeping with His exceedingly abundant promise in Ephesians 3:20 - my anchor verse for our time in this special place. It will be most difficult to separate from so many of you who have influenced our lives deeply, encouraging and challenging us to new levels of commitment and calling. However, the opportunity to devote the capstone years of my career to equipping the next generation of emerging Christian leaders to change their world is a compelling and persistent vision we must fulfill. From the Taylor University Board of Trustees, our devoted alumni and gifted faculty, to our dedicated staff and outstanding students who have touched us in ways that we could never fully express, we say thank you and thanks to our God for His work through you!

Like any transition process, there are details which need to be finalized. While the exact date of my departure is dependent upon the selection of my successor, please be assured that we are working with the Board to ensure a seamless transition. And, just as we are excited about God's new direction for our lives, we have a great sense of anticipation as the next season of God's plan for Taylor University's life transforming mission unfolds. By God's grace and your faithfulness we believe that Taylor is in a strong position to continue its history of worldwide impact for the kingdom of Jesus Christ. As you remain uncompromisingly Christ-centered and biblically anchored, Taylor will continue to be an important catalyst in God's plans for a world that desperately needs to both hear and experience the redemptive love of Jesus Christ.

May the Lord continue to do exceedingly abundantly above all that you could ask or even imagine in your calling to be a Christ-centered learning, living and serving community.

It was his desire to mentor the next generation of Christian leaders that led David Gyertson to the presidencies of three of the nation's leading Christian colleges – and now it's that desire that is taking him back to the classroom.

Gyertson, who arrived at Taylor in 2000, will complete his presidency on or sometime before December 31st, depending upon the results of the ongoing search for his successor. He announced his resignation in January – a move that cleared the way for him to become the Distinguished Professor of Leadership Formation and Renewal at the School of Leadership Studies at Regent University, Virginia Beach, Virginia; an institution he co-founded in 1977.

“We are really going to be sorry to leave Taylor because it has been a great experience and a great privilege. But the reality is that we are being called back to what we felt our original call is,” Gyertson said. “The vision to be equipping the emerging world leaders for the Christian faith has been deep in my spirit for 30 years. We want to finish well (at Taylor); but as I get some time to reflect, I am filled with great thanksgiving to the Lord.”

While contemplating his years at Taylor, Gyertson noted the strength of the Upland academic and community life programs as well as the urban location and diversity of the student body on Taylor’s Fort Wayne campus. But ultimately, it was the community he found here that made the most lasting impression.

“A thing that is common to both campuses that I’m going to remember is the passion for excellence in both academic and interpersonal relationships, and this is worked out through serving one another during times of need,” he said. “I think Taylor is at its best when it’s in a time of crisis; where people need to be personally supported and assisted. I would say that Taylor probably does this crisis-intervention and bearing-one-another’s-burdens thing better than I’ve seen most other places.”

Gyertson himself was a pastor of sorts to the Taylor community, often sending e-mail messages of praise to faculty and staff, as well as calling upon members of the Taylor community during illnesses or other times of crisis.

“One of the great remembrances that I’ll take away is that Taylor is a fairly diverse culture in terms of opinions, theological positions and world views; with all of them anchored in Christ,” he said. “Those differences have not caused us to separate from one another but to work together. Often that is called the irenic spirit and I think that Taylor is one of the true examples of irenic spirit.”

“While he can and has made the tough decisions, his tender pastor’s heart, constancy in prayer, and obedience to God’s leading has had lasting impact on my life,” said Harold Hazen, vice president for University Advancement. “I have learned much under his mentoring style of leadership.”

“If I would talk about any accomplishment, I would hope it would be that I helped Taylor define its vision, its mission and its core values; and that we reinforced the importance of being centered in Christ and anchored to scripture. I continue to believe these are the very building blocks, the foundation stones, of what has kept Taylor in the center, I think, of God’s will for 159 years,” Gyertson stated.

“I wish that, on my watch, we had been able to complete the vision and mission implementation for the Fort Wayne campus,” he added. “I think that all of the things that are necessary for it to be productive and successful in terms of its mission, its vision, and its governance structures are in place. I think that the ability to resource that at levels that it’s going to need is going to be very significant to its success, and that’s true for the Upland campus as well.”

“I have personally benefited greatly from Dr. Gyertson’s wonderful gift for mentoring,” said Hazen. “He has spoken often about this generation of students having such enormous potential to influence the world for Jesus Christ. He is gifted with ‘leading edge’ insight and ideas, so it is not surprising that God has chosen to use him on the leading edge of training the next generation of global Christians.”

“I would hope it could honestly be said of me what was said of King David in Acts: that he served God’s purposes while he was here and that there was no question about Nancy’s and my desire to do what was right, because this has been a team thing,” he said. “These jobs cannot be done without a team approach, first between the husband and wife, and then between the senior leadership team. One of the things that I will remember significantly is that the Lord has blessed me with a great team of people to work with at every level; it’s been a wonderful experience.”

Fulfilling the Great Commission

For nearly a half century, students who have walked the halls of the Fort Wayne campus have shared a similar experience: a Dr. Wes Gerig class.

With 47 years, "Dr. Wes" holds the record for longest faculty tenure the Fort Wayne campus, and he does not plan on quitting anytime soon.

Dr. Wes continues to teach after all these years because, "I can fulfill the Great Commission directly, here," he shares. He has had numerous offers to fill pastorates, but has not hesitated to turn them down; "I can affect more churches, pastors and missionaries through teaching." He explains, "I have a part in training Christian workers all over the world. Teaching provides me the opportunity to prepare pastors and missionaries who will in turn prepare congregations and souls. I can touch a multitude of people (lay people and pastors alike) in a variety of denominations, this way."

When Taylor University merged with Summit Christian College, Dr. Wes' vision for the campus was that TUFW become the Christian ministry arm of Taylor University. "This place has become exactly what I (envisioned)."

After nearly 50 years of teaching biblical theology, Dr. Wes shares "the students are the same as they used to be . . . hungry [for God]," he adds, "[though] they may dress differently."

He knows his classes are rigorous, and he continues to use the same teaching methods he always has. He says, "I don't force on my students what I didn't like as a student (lack of structure). My students are going to be organized and know what is expected of them." He is encouraged to know that students are learning so much. "Many [students] share that their grades aren't reflective of what they've learned." Many more of his students are first generation Christians, whereas in the past more of them had a history of Christian lineage.

Dr. Wes shares, "A liberal arts education is more than Christians teaching a certain subject; a liberal arts education provides Christian leaders an opportunity to integrate faith with subject matter. It provides a broader exposure and explains that God is revealed to us via nature (physical science), our conscience (psychology/social sciences), etc." He adds, "We need to remember that God revealed Himself to us more than just through the Bible."

"The Bible is my life; I hope that shows."

Being About the Lord's Business

Our Mission

Taylor University is an interdenominational evangelical Christian institution educating men and women for lifelong learning and for ministering the redemptive love of Jesus Christ to a world in need. As a Christian community of students, faculty, staff and administration committed to the Lordship of Jesus Christ, Taylor University offers postsecondary liberal arts and professional education based upon the conviction that all truth has its source in God.

Students participated in Evan's interview process; their dedication and commitment impressed Evan that "Taylor Fort Wayne students are serious about their learning."

And so, Evan acknowledges that he is a demanding professor. His goal in teaching is that five years after graduation students will appreciate the rigorous assignments he required ... identifying that they were equipped and prepared for the ethical questions they faced in business.

Being About the Lord's Business

Seeing the impact his father had on his students, Evan Wood knew that teaching would be in his future.

Evan Wood spent eight years in the marketplace prior to coming to Taylor Fort Wayne. What he enjoyed most about business, he says, was the human interaction. "Business brings people together," he reflects. A problem solver by design, Evan shares a secondary love for business, "Business afforded me the opportunity to analyze and restructure problems."

His responsibilities included training, motivating and developing staff, from entry-level to executive personnel. Instructing a wide range of material shaped how Evan taught: "I found the best way to teach was to understand the information from the perspective of the individual."

It was those years spent in business that confirmed teaching was the right "fit" for Evan. Seeing firsthand the effects of poor preparation of college graduates entering the workforce, Evan also knew "where I wanted to be was preparing students for industry."

Evan reflects, "First, God called me into the study of management and marketing. Next, God called me to teach college students. Now, God has led me to Taylor University Fort Wayne."

"At first, I was hesitant about the small campus size – then I came to visit. I was impressed with the facilities, but was even more impressed with the students, faculty and staff. What caught my attention was everyone's passion to excel at God's calling in his/her life."

"Taylor Fort Wayne's 'smallness' allows me the opportunity to really get to know my students and colleagues. That kind of interaction would not be possible at a larger school with larger classes. I believe a small student-teacher ratio benefits both the students and faculty."

Dedicated Faculty

Fort Wayne campus teaching and nonteaching faculty have long had a reputation for their dedication to students both in and out of the classroom. The following highlights a mere handful of thoughts regarding students' appreciation for faculty dedication

I met Dr. Biberstein before coming to Taylor University in the late 1970's when he filled in for our pastor. Since coming to Taylor, I have found him to be a "father" figure as well as a man having "God's Heart." Dr. Biberstein has become a close friend, role model and a positive leader in my life. I believe him to be a man of character who has dedicated his life to changing the lives of others.

Michael Fulk

During the past three years, I've come to know Pastor Biberstein as more than a professor, but actually as a friend. I know that I could share any problem, worry, or victory with him.... I'm assured that God sent him into my life to aide my spiritual maturity.

Richard Harris

God called me to missionary work. My dad didn't want me leaving the country; he didn't want to lose his daughter. One weekend he came to Taylor to visit. Dr. Biberstein took the time to meet with him and afterwards not only did my dad give me his approval, he also told me he was proud of me for following God's calling on my life!

Jennifer Omerso

Dr. Biberstein is a Pastor/Teacher in every sense of the "Word." His kindness and generosity are legend on campus!

Karen Gunder

I have known Dick Baxter (pictured left) for nearly 10 years. The one thing that jumps out at me more than anything is the heart he has for the students.

I remember the fall of my sophomore year at Taylor, we were on a leadership retreat before the semester started and I was really struggling with my life. "Why was I at Taylor? What Major?" Etc! Dick and I sat by the campfire for a few hours...he mainly listened, but threw bits of wisdom my way.

In January of 2000, Dick asked me if I would like to go to Jamaica with him and another student. Up until then I really laughed at the Taylor trips to Jamaica. I thought they were an excuse to simply go to a warm climate. On the first trip I saw the love he has for the people of Jamaica. Like so many others have said before me, and those who will continue to say, "Thanks for sharing your love for Jamaica with me!" Since then I have returned to Jamaica 12 times. The lives changed (both Jamaicans and Taylor students) because of this ministry is almost mind boggling.

Dick has a way of touching students' lives. He spends countless hours ministering to students, knowing that maturity is a process. He is something different to everyone: teacher, mentor, liaison, ear to talk to, shoulder to cry on, brother in Christ, father figure, friend!

John Engler

During my four years at Taylor University as a public relations major, special bonds were formed with faculty. Seeing that more time was spent with professors than with family, the interaction became both scholarly as well as friendship based. My advisor, Heather St. Peters (pictured this page, at left), guided me through the internship program as a student and I now ask her first for public relations student interns. When I was employed with the Red Cross, Heather came through on several occasions, sending students our way for internship needs. I have found that TUFW has the best internship program in Fort Wayne, having been through it and now having dealt with students from other schools. TUFW students have shown to be the most prepared both personally and professionally, in terms of work ethic and reliability, as well. Now, employed with the Fort Wayne Chamber of Commerce, I look forward to further collaborations with TUFW. Dr. Hensley (pictured right) and I have maintained a business relationship as well as a friendship. He is always willing to take time out of his busy schedule to help me in my current graduate studies. These and the other public relations professors who saw me along the educational process have been great encouragement for me both personally and professionally.

James Rediger

Most of my public relations professors were not just teachers, but friends and counselors when I needed them. I could tell this was more than a job and that they believed in what they were doing. To them, teaching was more than presenting facts, it was about investing time, energy and love into their students. The professors cared about us beyond the classroom. They wanted to give us tools to be successful in life.

My public relations classes provided project opportunities with real-life clients. When Mark Vermilion, chair of the department at the time, suggested pursuing an internship at Parkview Hospital, I felt prepared for the daunting task. The position turned into a full-time job, after I graduated in January 2000. I returned to my home state of Oregon in 2004 and continue to serve in hospital public relations at St. Charles Medical Center's two campuses in Bend and Redmond, Oregon, where I serve as the marketing and community relations coordinator.

Faculty and Student Honors and Accomplishments

Dr. Doug Barcalow, professor of Christian education, and Dr. Pam Jordan, professor of English, have been appointed associate deans for Taylor University Fort Wayne, assisting Dr. Ronald Sloan, associate vice president of academic affairs. Barcalow will serve as Executive Director of the Summer Youth Consortium this summer, funded by the Foellinger Foundation. He is also scheduled to be Family Camp speaker at TimberLee Christian Center this summer in East Troy, WI.

Dr. David Biberstein, professor of pastoral ministries, taught and preached in the Grace Missionary Church of Kingston and the First Missionary Church of Kingston while he served Jamaica Theological Seminary in January.

Sam Bright, senior, attended Inside Washington, January 17-28. Sponsored by The Washington Center, Inside is a special academic seminar focusing on the presidential inauguration and the next presidential administration. Sam is majoring in management, a degree he will complete in three years with a 4.0 GPA.

Since January, Dr. Wes Gerig, professor of Bible, has been filling pulpits of Broadway Christian Church, First Christian Church and First Missionary Church, and teaching the book of Acts in the adult Sunday School class at Westview Alliance.

Dr. Ken Johnson, professor of music, arranged and produced the songs on a CD, entitled, Psalms, Hymns and Spiritual Songs. Dr. Jay Platte g69, professor of music/director community school of the arts and Deb (Lehman) Shaw g80, faculty assistant for community school of the arts/music department secretary, contributed to the project. Jerroll Lehman, adjunct professor, music department, is the producer and engineer.

Dr. Pam Jordan, professor of English, presented a paper "George MacDonald's Unpublished Annotated Manuscript of Shakespeare's Hamlet" at the C. S. Lewis and the Inklings Conference at Oral Roberts University, April 1-2.

Jennifer Manth, director, transition to teaching program, and Sonja Strahm, assistant professor/director of the academic center for enrichment, attended TESOL (Teachers of English to Speakers of Other Languages) conference in San Antonio, TX, at the end of March.

Dr. Bruce Pratt, associate professor of physical education and human performance, attended AAHPERD (American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation & Dance) 2005-The National Convention and Expo in Chicago, April 13-16.

Dr. John Schutt, associate professor for environmental science, is authoring Fox Island County Park almanac. His project was featured in the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel, in the March 30 issue.

Sonja Strahm, assistant professor/director of the academic center for enrichment, serves as vice president of the National Association for Developmental Education (NADE). In her role as vice president of NADE, she has attended conferences in Tennessee, Texas, Indiana and Nevada this past fall.

Evan Wood, assistant professor of business, attended Northwestern's Annual Marketing Conference in January. He is also developing a strategic marketing plan for Cox Moulding Inc.

Fourteen Graduate with MBA Degrees

Fourteen men and women received master's degrees from Taylor's MBA program in December. These first graduates of the MBA program are prepared to effectively model servant leadership, oversee critical business functions, develop sustainable growth strategies and demonstrate decision-making and management skills.

Many professors come from around the country to instruct in the MBA program and have earned business doctorates from such institutions as Indiana University, Texas A&M University, University of Texas at Arlington, Texas Christian University and the University of Arkansas.

Admission for the next MBA class, which begins in August 2005, is in progress. For more information or to enroll, contact Nancy Johnson at 260.744.8995, toll-free 866.471.6062 or via e-mail at mba@tayloru.edu or visit the MBA website at <http://fw.taylor.edu/mba>.

The Taylor University MBA program will relocate its offices and classes to the Northeast Indiana Innovation Center this July. The Innovation Center helps business entrepreneurs create and develop new firms in a wide variety of business sectors, including advanced manufacturing, biomedical and information technology industries.

The Innovation Center serves as a learning lab for the MBA Program by offering a wide range of class projects and directed study assignments for Taylor's graduate business students.

Business and community seminars sponsored by the MBA Program and hosted on campus are planned for the future. Graduate business students will continue to utilize TUFW facilities for research and selected residency sessions.

Author brings voices together

Neil Anderson, founder of Freedom in Christ Ministries, spends a week at Taylor University Fort Wayne.

Dr. Neil T. Anderson, author of 40 books including “Victory Over the Darkness” and “The Bondage Breaker” series, uses his books and conferences he conducts around the world to help readers understand how to overcome problems like depression, doubt, negative self-image and addictions.

“You’re probably looking at the only guy in America who has written books with doctors, counselors, theologians and missiologists,” said Anderson, who recently spoke at Taylor University Fort Wayne. “I try to bring all of their thoughts together with mine as a pastor to present a holistic Christian message.”

The difference between Anderson’s approach and that of other authors is that he believes that, rather than taking a “self-help” approach, people should depend on Christ to solve their problems.

“My great desire is to show people how Christ is the answer for their problems and how He can set them free,” Anderson said.

Raised on a Minnesota farm, Anderson served four years in the Navy after high school. Then he earned a degree in electrical engineering and worked as an aerospace engineer on the Apollo lunar landing project.

Anderson believed he had it all: a wife, family, good job. He attended church regularly and considered himself religious. Then Anderson attended a Campus Crusade for Christ meeting that changed his whole world.

When he was asked to share his faith in Christ, he realized he didn’t have any. He decided to accept Christ as his Savior. Soon, he quit his job as an engineer and enrolled in theological seminary.

“It isn’t that I was running away from engineering, as much as I was running toward something,” he said.

That something was a desire to learn more about God. After seminary, Anderson felt called by God to be a pastor. Eight years later, he felt God calling him to teach at Talbot University.

That lasted for a decade. Then in 1989, Anderson again felt God calling him to start Freedom in Christ Ministries. He went full-time with the ministry in 1992.

Little more than a decade later, FICM has offices in England, Switzerland, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, India, Ivory Coast and South Africa. When he isn’t traveling to these locales, Anderson teaches doctor of ministry classes at seminaries and leads FICM conferences around the world.

Anderson attributes his success with writing popular books and developing his ministry with asking the right questions.

“Every book I’ve written was to answer a question. ‘What do I tell people to do about anxiety? What about depression, fear, marriage, leadership?’ We’ve covered the gamut of felt needs people have and showed how Christ can bring resolution.”

His next book, a devotional called “Daily Discipler,” will help people understand what it means to be rooted, growing, living and overcoming in Christ. It is due this spring from Regal Books.

He has also been researching problems of teens across the country. When the material is gathered, he plans to write a book for parents to help troubled teens. No matter what the subject, Anderson believes his varied life experiences have helped him as an author.

“People ask me how long it took to write a certain book. I tell them it took 62 years. Almost all of my books came out of my own life experiences, whereas I only have 25 years of formal education.”

Anderson shared openly about his wife’s problem with depression in his books.

“I didn’t know for 15 months if she was going to live or die,” he said. “Literally, we lost everything we had.” However, instead of reeling from despair and bitterness, Anderson founded Freedom in Christ.

“Even though it was a broken experience, it didn’t break me,” he said. “It made me.”

Myric McBain, TUFV, and Abby Butler, TUU, elementary education seniors, talk with the guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldiers while visiting Washington D.C. in January.

Capstone

A culmination of the core classes taken in their major during January of their senior year, students participate in senior seminar - capstone. During which, many seniors take trips.

Elementary education majors headed to Washington D.C. The locale has become an annual January excursion, as local elementary students in grades 5, 8 and 12 take trips to the capitol. "We wanted to provide Taylor students with a field trip experience that they may likely take their future students on," shares Quinn White, associate professor of elementary education. The group visited sites from the White House and U.S. Capitol to the Holocaust, Viet Nam, Lincoln, Jefferson and WWII Memorials.

Unique opportunities arose this year at Arlington National Cemetery and the group attended the inauguration of President George W. Bush.

Myric McBain, a Taylor Fort Wayne student who served for a year-and-a-half in Afghanistan, and Abby Butler, a Taylor Upland student and friend of Corporal Lance Thompson, who was killed in Iraq in November, were chosen to place the wreath at the Tomb.

"I felt the whole time as though those [who were] interred there were watching me to see if the life I've lived met the standards that they had set ... by their sacrifices," said McBain. "Although I still feel that my service in no way approached [theirs], the acceptance I found with this group of students helped to alleviate the uneasiness I felt in being there."

"Seeing history-of-the-past, as they visited the memorials, and experiencing history-in-the-making, at the inauguration, provided many students a new perspective to teaching," reflects Quinn. Rachel Kinney, senior, shares "It would be incredible to take some of my future classes...to D.C." Erica Stratton, senior, adds, "I will be sure to pass on the knowledge and lessons I have learned to my future students."

DEDICATED “TO ACT JUSTLY” (Micah 6 :8)

Daniel Webster said that “justice is the great interest of man on earth. It is an abiding interest and an enduring value because of our need to preserve social order and control in society without sacrificing individual liberties and rights.” Taylor Fort Wayne’s Justice Studies program offers innovative and unique concentrations to support those who are interested in justice careers: Criminal Justice (Policing, Probation and Corrections), Law and Justice (Pre-Law), and Justice Ministry (Chaplaincy).

Seniors in the justice and ministry program are highlighted below.

Recent graduates and their commitment to fulfilling Micah 6:8 are: Erin (Mix) Downs g03 is pursuing an M.A. and J.D. in Public Policy at Ohio State University Law School. She will clerk for an Ohio Supreme Court Justice this summer. She hopes to write legislation and formulate public policy. Brant Mendenhall g03 works with mentally ill adults in northern Indiana. Evan Boggs g04 was the Outstanding Student completing the Indiana State Police Academy School in February 2005. Evan is an officer with the Elkhart County Police Department. Nathanael Martin g04 was the runner-up for the Outstanding Student completing the Indiana State Police Academy School in February 2005. Nathanael seeks a law enforcement position with a local agency in northern Indiana.

Back row (left to right): Jenny Neilson has been accepted into the Taylor MBA Program and will attend law school after receiving her MBA. Adam Turner has been accepted into the Regent University Law School. Patrick Jessup plans to attend Law School. Aaron Stucky has been accepted into the Indiana University Bloomington Law School. Kristie MacDonald applied for a position with Youth Services Center, Allen County. Front row (left to right): Ginga Elbel plans to serve in a translator’s position with a federal agency. Kylee Shirey has been accepted into the Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis Law School. Tresa Yates seeks a position as chaplain in a Fort Wayne agency. Seniors not pictured: Tommy Boggs plans to work in corrections, Katherine Kelpin plans to attend graduate school at William and Mary or Regent Law School. Not pictured: Charles Marseilles plans to work as a corrections chaplain.

Women's Basketball

A new season, a new start, and a new head coach—the 2004-2005 Taylor Fort Wayne Lady Falcons Basketball team wiped last season's slate clean.

After losing two seniors and leading scorers—Katie Broecker and Amy Edmonds—from the 2003-2004 season, the Lady Falcons had to rebuild their line-up as well as replace their head coach (filled by Bonnie Bonelli). The start of the season seemed grim when fans sat through a few painful losses in the St. Francis Tournament. However, things turned around when the team realized they needed to depend on each other instead of just one player.

"In the past two years, we just looked to one person to lead us on the court. This year is different. We have learned to rely on each other. We have learned that we cannot play the game on our own. We need each other, and every single player contributes," senior Ginger Robbins comments on her reconstructed team. And it really did show. The ladies finished their season traveling to Broken Arrow, Oklahoma, for the USCAA National Tournament, placing fifth and bringing home the consolation plaque. Their final record was 20-10, adding nine more wins to last season's record.

Some individuals finished their season with significant honors. Becca Eleiott received the USCAA All-American Award and was named to the National All-Tournament Team. Lizzi Garrassi and Jessica Warriner both received the USCAA Academic All-American Award.

The ladies' hearts were demonstrated by their growth as a team, as individuals and as followers of Christ.

Men's Basketball

The Taylor Fort Wayne men's basketball team finished their 2004-2005 season 15-17. The numbers, however, do not reveal the heart the men had for the game. The men began another season with more players than they ended with and yet continually impressed the community with their ability to win, or come extremely close, against what seemed to be the stronger team.

Four returning starters began the season, by second semester, the team was down to six players. Even though the roster became smaller, the players grew into a solid team. Senior, Patrick Jessup, and juniors, Kevin Woods and Isaac McClung, were key players who led in stats each game.

Patrick was named USCAA All-American and USCAA Academic All-American. He was also named to the All-Tournament team in the Circleville and the Indiana University South Bend Tournaments. He broke the school record for most three pointers made and is Taylor's third all-time leading scorer. Isaac McClung was a USCAA Player of the Week and was named to the USCAA second team All-American. Kevin Woods was tournament MVP of the Circleville Tournament and was the first to receive USCAA Player of the Week in the division. Kyle Waalen also won a USCAA Academic All-American Award.

The team finished eighth in the USCAA Division II, nationally. Because they finished one game under .500 they were not able to accept the invitation to the National Tournament.

The heartbreaker of the season was that the men lost seven games by four points or less and three games right at the buzzer. The very last game finished their season with a win against Division I Marygrove College.

Athlete Gets “Fresh Faith” Perspective

Taylor Stubblefield, Purdue University Football's 2005 record-setting wide receiver, and Taylor University's Center for Lifelong Learning student, donated an autographed jersey of his number to the Big Brothers and Big Sisters Club, Fort Wayne, IN.

It's safe to say that no other student at Taylor University has ever been mobbed for autographs upon the successful completion of a class, but this was not just any student. He was Taylor Stubblefield; the record-setting wide receiver from the Purdue University football team, and the occasion was a reception hosted at Taylor University's Fort Wayne campus. Stubblefield took an online New Testament survey course through Taylor's Center for Lifelong Learning (CLL); the course allowed him to complete his degree in organizational leadership and supervision from Purdue's School of Technology.

"It was the last class I needed," Stubblefield said following the brief reception on Taylor's Fort Wayne campus which was attended by about 75 people who had him sign everything from football jerseys to action photos. "We could take an elective and when the opportunity came, [the class] looked exciting and I wanted to get in."

Stubblefield is one of nearly 1,600 students nationwide who take classes through Taylor's CLL to complete their college degrees. The virtual campus offers over 120 different courses ranging from history and philosophy to criminal justice and theology - all taught by Taylor full-time and adjunct faculty.

And, like Purdue, a number of other colleges and universities throughout the country including Clemson, Florida State and the University of Washington use the CLL to augment course offerings for their students.

Stubblefield, who juggled his schoolwork with appearances in the East-West Shrine Game and Senior Bowl, said he liked the freedom the CLL course gave him in setting his own pace. "It [was] a tremendous value for me. I could work at my own speed," he said, adding that he alternated between asking his professor for help and figuring out some of the tougher elements to the course for himself.

"Taylor is absolutely wonderful. He and I have become very good friends, and he is truly a gentleman," said Cheri Zelenka, operations manager at the CLL. "God is a very important part of his life. He is not only an exceptional athlete, but he is intelligent and well-spoken."

"He was very friendly and kind to the kids and adults who came to meet him," she added. "He is so down-to-earth and unchanged by all of the media attention he receives. He will be a very inspirational role model to many kids as he enters the NFL."

Stubblefield said he had enjoyed his experience with the CLL and felt the class had given his faith a new perspective.

"I liked [the class] a lot. It allowed me to more fully understand the Bible," he said. "The value of knowing what the Scriptures say; reading with purpose and applying it to your life; it's like the credit card commercial says, 'Priceless.'"

Called to Make Disciples

Richard Harris, nontraditional student pastoral ministries major

At 58, Richard Harris is an unlikely college student but then again not much is “predictable” about Richard.

Richard had anything but a typical childhood. Tragedy struck when he was just 10 years old; he witnessed his mother's murder. Not able to deal with his pain and his fears, he masked his feelings by involving himself in athletics, music and church.

“At age 17, God called me to ministry. I wanted to help people but I didn't want to be a pastor; I'd seen too many ‘phony’ ones. (Only much later did I realize I had no excuse to accuse others of being phony. I discovered I had to be real myself. When I stepped out of myself, I saw fear... and all my pursuits were in effort to cover that up.)”

Richard enrolled at IU-Bloomington in the fall of 1966 to pursue medicine and play football. When his love for medicine faded, he pursued a singing career; went to Hollywood and ended up with a contract with Capital Records. The fame, money and “Hollywood lifestyle” was more than he could take, though. He returned to Indiana and did not sing for many years. “There was nothing to sing about,” Richard reflects. “God puts that song in you to give to others; and I didn't have it.”

For the next 30 years Richard worked in a variety of fields from engineering to owning his own business; he reflects, “I was living an empty life. I knew I hadn't fulfilled what God wanted me to do, I was just merely existing.”

Then the Holy Spirit prompted him to go back to school. “I thought, ‘I don't have the time or money to go back to school.’” But he could not resist the Spirit.

He enrolled at TUFW in 2001. “I felt too old to go back to school. I said, ‘I can't do this.’ The Lord let me know I was right, I can't, He can.” His heart still aching to help others, Richard declared psychology as his major, but the Lord's plans would prevail. Richard ultimately declared pastoral ministries as his major as the Lord had directed him four decades before. “Pastoral ministries is the best way I could find to help people,” Richard begins, “the Word is the best medicine.”

While still currently a student with two more semesters before he graduates, Richard knows beyond a doubt that “this is where the Lord wants me to be. We've been commanded to teach the younger men. That's my calling, even from here (TUFW), to go out and make disciples. Graduates will not all be pastors, but they will be people changing their communities for Christ, changing the world's heart and mind. That is the whole reason for coming here...to go out (and change the world.)”

Giving to a place you believe in

Contributing to an institution that prepares students for God's work in a needy world is my desire.

Though it sometimes may seem like a daunting task, finalizing your estate plan will free you from worry. There's no better time than the present to secure your financial future and there's no better place to give than to one you believe in.

Creating a legacy that will live on

It is gratifying to support Taylor where lives are enriched and eyes are opened to the needs all over the world.

Giving to Taylor Fort Wayne will allow your legacy to live on in the lives of students who are prepared to minister the redemptive love of Jesus Christ to a world in need.

Trusting your estate planners

The estate planners are more than qualified. It is reassuring to know my estate will be distributed according to my wishes.

You can face the future knowing that your estate will be distributed according to your wishes and that people you trust will be in charge.

WBCL's Talk Show Still a Favorite

The theme rolls, the microphones open and the Mid-Morning hosts are pumped and ready to go. Monday through Friday, Char Binkley, Lynne Ford and Maria Gardner (pictured below, l to r) host a fun and informative Mid-Morning program that challenges and inspires.

FOOD At the top of the fun list is the annual ice cream taste test that has listeners shamelessly begging to be one of the six chosen tasters.

BOOKS Listeners call to interact on the content of best-selling authors' books. A monthly favorite is when Gloria Gaither joins Char to discuss a book they've both read.

MOPS The monthly MOPS Monday tackles topics of interest to moms of preschoolers. Moms comprise the live studio; gift bags are part of the pampering these moms deserve!

TCW Today's Christian Woman magazine comes alive on Mid-Morning.

Women featured in the magazine's current issue are guests, some of whom have included speaker and author Anne Graham Lotz, singer Kathy Troccoli, and Olympic diver Kimiko Soldati.

SOUL Soul Care is a new program featured monthly. Led by Mindy Caliguire, formerly involved in soul formation at Willow Creek Church, she guides an on-air group of six, directing listeners to reflect on an idea or question.

HEALTH A second new monthly program, "Getting Healthy in 2005," focuses on diet and exercise. Personal trainers and wellness professionals oversee three staff members as they weigh in and report their successes each month.

No two days are ever the same on Mid-Morning, but every day promises a listening opportunity filled with relevant and challenging experiences.

Alumni Director Follows His Calling

Nearly eight years ago, I was given the opportunity to return to Taylor University Fort Wayne, the campus where my dad and mom, Rev. Phil g74 and Fran h99 Mortensen, brought me in 1970. Accepting the offer has become one of the best decisions of my life -- no other role has been more fulfilling or rewarding.

Since June 2, 1997, millions of dollars have been raised by our team, alumni giving participation rates have increased, and new programs and buildings have been initiated and built. I have grown spiritually and professionally, and I will always be indebted to the University for this opportunity. Thank you Fort Wayne alumni for giving me, an Upland grad, an opportunity to be your alumni director.

With this in mind; however, I have prayerfully decided to pursue what I perceive as my calling. My wife, Christine, our five children and I are becoming missionaries. I have accepted an offer to become the volunteer services coordinator for World Partners USA, where I will promote, recruit and organize short-term projects internationally in order to expand the Kingdom.

The skills I have developed and the opportunities at Taylor University will give me a strong foundation in this new role. My family and I will always be grateful for these eight years. Our calling truly has taken shape here.

The search for your new alumni director is in my prayers. Exciting days are still ahead -- keep praying, participating and promoting! Blessings,

Michael

TUFW Receives South Side Award

The South Side Business Group (SSBG) of Fort Wayne presented Taylor University Fort Wayne with a Marvin Berger Award at an awards ceremony in late March. The award is named for Marvin Berger who was a founding board member of the group and served as treasurer until he passed away in 2004.

TUFW received the award in recognition for recent construction projects, the Eicher Student Commons and the Calvin H. English Library, which made a significant improvement to both the campus and the south side community.

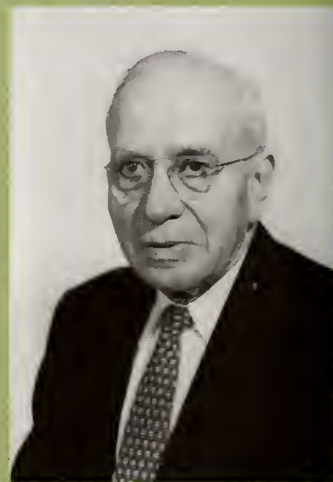

Jim Tolbert, SSBG board member, shared, "The SSBG is grateful for the presence, the people, and the prosperity derived from the university's mission. Taylor University returning to Fort Wayne in 1992 stabilized the city's south side and has been improving the neighborhood continuously.

"The community also benefits from the people of Taylor Fort Wayne. The campus provides the local community with volunteers, interns, and graduates, which possess a high degree of character and integrity. These important qualities arise from the administration's emphasis on faith integration and spiritual formation. The Fort Wayne campus is a light and a beacon of hope to the challenges facing the urban community.

"Finally, the SSBG appreciates Taylor University Fort Wayne for the prosperity generated by its activities. Students, and the tuition dollars they represent, provide a net increase in the area's local economy. These dollars come from other regions, states, and countries in the form of spendable income. Federal and State financial aid comes here because the money follows the students here. In addition, local commuter students and non-traditional students keep money in the area by not leaving to seek elsewhere the kind of education provided at Taylor University Fort Wayne. This is important for the local economy."

Peter Eicher Society

Rev. Peter Eicher is often credited with saving Fort Wayne Bible Institute from possible bankruptcy during the economic crisis of the 1930's. His wise management, devoted self-giving and bargain-buying all combined to stabilize the institution during those years of emergency. He was affectionately called "Uncle Pete" by the entire college family.

Members of the Peter Eicher Society are faculty and staff who, in the same spirit of "Uncle Pete," sacrificially give of themselves in support of the Fort Wayne campus. Eighty-eight percent of full-time employees contribute to the Fort Wayne Fund, 85 percent of all employees contribute, providing students the training to reach a lost world for Christ.

Dedicated to the future

Gary Wilber has worked in a variety of places. When he attended college, however, he discovered what he had a passion for and how he could channel it into his work. Today, as superintendent of Troy Christian School, Gary helps students tap into their own strengths.

Gary started Troy Christian School 24 years ago when his oldest daughter was entering kindergarten. He and his wife, Carla, were looking for a school that provided the same educational values that they taught their children at home.

The school has shown impressive growth—increasing from 37 to 978 students. Carla Wilber eventually joined her husband and now works as the school's nurse.

Hoping students leave Troy Christian School with a better understanding of their spiritual strengths and talents, Carla says the school strives to instill four key qualities: respect, responsibility, gratitude and genuineness.

“Through the required Christian service we did as college students, I found out who I was and what my gifts and talents were,” Gary explains. “It had such an impact that we now require this kind of service from the students in our school.”

Phonathon Exceeds Goal

The Lord supplied exceeding abundantly above the Phonathon goal of $65,000; through faithful alumni, Phonathon reached $80,000.

We thank God for the privilege of working in collaboration with faculty, staff, students and alumni.

Over 10 nights, 11 students, 10 alumni and four employees volunteered 142 hours of service, making calls to 2300 Fort Wayne campus alumni. An additional 12 alumni, employees and friends donated treats or took the time to pray for Phonathon; 315 prayer requests were taken from our alumni during Phonathon.

$20,854 of the total income is new money or an increase over last year's giving.

To God be the Glory... Great things he has done for us and for Taylor University Fort Wayne!

Fort Wayne alumni specific Web site

Taylor Fort Wayne is pleased to announce the launch of my.taylor.edu, an on-line resource for alumni that features a secure password-protected alumni directory. With this directory, you will be able to view and update your alumni record, determine what information you want displayed, submit news for the alumnus magazine, search for classmates, make online gifts and much more! Watch for additional information in the mail.

For a career with conviction

Counseling

At Taylor University Fort Wayne, our dynamic programs are designed for women and men who seek academically rigorous career preparation rooted in spiritual values - and who are eager to use what they learn to make a difference in the world.

Students in our counseling program are given the tools to think critically and biblically, and to relate cross-culturally. Few other programs exist that combine the best of psychology, counseling, and Christian ministry at an undergraduate level.

Is God calling you into the field of counseling?
Let us help you follow your call!
