LOYALTY

Some comments from the annual report of the Alumni Association Executive Secretary

One of the purposes of the Taylor University Alumni Association as stated in the constitution is "to stimulate loyalty to the University." John B. Fullen, Alumni Director at Ohio State University and a leader among professional alumni workers, recently commented:

Great institutions as well as great nations are built on the loyalties of those who, recognizing the imperfections, nevertheless work to set them straight, to strive, to do, to build. . . Loyalty may be a trite word to some, but their very own status in life, financially, professionally and personally, has come from the manifested loyalties of thousands of persons who made opportunities possible for them. It took a heap of loyalties to build this University, and it's going to take a heap of them to keep it going."

Perhaps the biggest job of the Alumni Association is "stimulating loyalty." It cannot be satisfactorily done by one or two or even by a group—it is done by the entire "family" that is known as Taylor University, those who serve on the faculty and the staff, those who are grads and former students as well as those who are now enrolled, the board of directors and all those who have some connection with or interest in Taylor University. "For we are laborers together with God."

I have become aware through the past three years that there are a great many of those who have been students at Taylor who draw between themselves and their college a sort of "sheepskin curtain," shutting off themselves from the contribution the college has made to their lives, and shutting off the college from the advantage of their loyalty and experience. This ought not to be so. In most cases it need not be so.

It has not been so with a great many of the students who have gone from Taylor. The noble efforts of those who from small beginnings have built Taylor into a great institution of learning and service are to be admired. But think what it could mean had there been 100% loyalty. True loyalty cannot mean blind conformity, but it should signify active interest and concern about the institution that has served us so freely and so well.

Now, at a time when Taylor University is at the threshold of an advance planning program, it's going to take a heap of loyalties to keep this institution going! These loyalties must exist in spite of some signs of weakness. And loyalty for future years must continually be inspired in the students now on campus.

Loyalty to Taylor should not be a difficult obligation; it should be a glorious privilege. Our college is dedicated to Eternal Purposes and has the blessing of God who is glorified through these aims. To Him, more than mere loyalty is due.
On the Cover

Rev. Harry Bristow of Christian Youth Cinema presents President Bergwall with the “Film of the Year” award at ceremonies in Philadelphia. “Angel In Ebony” received the best of the year award while Cliff Macklin, who played the part of Sammy, was given the male actor of the year award and Ken Carmichael, who directed the film, was named the year’s outstanding director.

Off the Cuff

The people in the admissions office say they have been just about swamped with applications, and because there is no place to live, some will have to be turned away. Better tell the young people you want to come to Taylor they should apply early for next year. Several new faculty members are being added to take care of the increase in students. We’ve met some of them and know you’ll be glad to welcome them to the Lord’s work at Taylor.

You’ll enjoy seeing the pictures and floor plans for the proposed new dormitory. Then there’s some news about Don Odle and the Venture for Victory team, the new elementary education student teacher program and Taylor’s new radio broadcast, “Chapel Meditations.” If you want to get an idea of some of the planning a college dean does, note the story about Dr. Rediger’s visit to Michigan State.

In September, the Bulletin and Alumni Magazine will be in the form of a summary report on the past year’s operations and some plans for the future. Hope you enjoy it.

Increased Applications Bring Changes

Miss Grace D. Olson, Director of Admissions, indicates that more applications than we can accept are reaching her office. In a Christian institution there is the problem of selecting not only the academically qualified, but also those who are earnestly seeking training that will better prepare them for the Lord’s work. These fields of endeavor can range from business to missions, and it is now Taylor’s job to try to pick the most deserving. This has necessitated the attempt to interview personally as many applicants as possible in order to determine factors other than those evident on a transcript or letter of recommendation. In addition, the prospective student is now asked to submit an autobiography which will indicate a personal evaluation of his motives and ambitions. The final acceptance must be based on these additional factors if Taylor is to continue as an effective Christian College. This fall’s enrollment will probably be limited at 540 students. The increase over last year will be accommodated in off-campus housing until the new dormitory becomes a reality. The limited facilities for housing women off-campus will probably mean that we can accept more men than women for this next year.

TAYLOR TO RECEIVE $20,000 FOR SCHOLARSHIPS

Taylor University was named in the will of Isaac N. Ritenour to receive $20,000 of his estate which will total at least $150,000. The bulk of his estate was left to Church affiliated and Christian institutions. It is not determined for what purpose the scholarships at Taylor will be used, but the Fund will be invested in such a manner that it will be self sustaining.
The third Venture for Victory basketball team left Los Angeles airport on Monday, June 6, for a trip that will take them to Hawaii, Japan, Korea, Formosa, Indonesia, Indo China, Hong Kong and the Philippines to play a schedule of 100 games and present the message of Christianity in the Orient.

Coached by Don J. Odle, athletic director at Taylor, the team made up of players from Anderson College, Westmont College, the University of Southern California and Taylor will play under the banner of Youth for Christ International, which is sponsoring the tour. Schedules have been arranged by Dick Hillis and Ellsworth Culver of Orient Crusades.

Taylor team members making the trip are Don Callan, Lawrenceburg, Indiana; Ken Stark, Owatonna, Minnesota; and Joe Grabill, Grapill, Indiana. Bob Culp and Richard Brown, Anderson College; Jack Mount, University of Southern California; Tine Hardeman, Westmont College; Bud Schaeffer, former Wheaton College star; and Norm Cook, Taylor graduate, complete the team. Schaeffer and Cook are in the Orient on missionary assignments.

Odle led similar teams to the Orient in the summers of 1952 and 1953. Commenting on how the Venture fits into the world situation, Odle says: "There is probably a more receptive mood in the Orient now than ever before. Those engaged in the battle against communism there need the encouragement and spiritual help of the Christian people of America, and we are glad to be able to use this unorthodox approach.” The team was awarded a Freedom’s Foundation Medal in 1953 for the good will fostered.

Odle expects to return with the team by September 3. At that time they will have covered more than 60,000 miles playing ball and preaching.

Late Flash!

Coach Odle reports from Korea that the team was hit by sickness. All of the players missed at least one game. However, they are feeling much better and praising the Lord for the ministry. They won 9 of 10 games and saw over 2,500 accept Christ. Pray for the fellows and their ministry as they labor for Him.

The Dean’s List

Thirty-six students have made the dean’s list for the second semester according to an announcement by Dr. Milo Rediger, academic Dean. The following students maintained the necessary 2.6 average over the 18 weeks work: Carolyn Bailey, Roselyn Baugh, Barbara Benjamin, Alta Blasdell, Dwight Conrad, Marjorie Conrad, Duane Cuthbertson, Elsie Dahl, Ann Donker, Mary Dreihau, June Frautschy, Rita Gerhardt, Robert Gilkison, Ernestine Good, Sarah Greiner, Geraldine Gries, Mitsuko Higa, John Hinkle, Walter Huitema, Raymond Isely, Joyce Kaufmann, Don Martin, Miriam Martin, Virgil Myers, Anna Newhard, Eloise Olcott, Kan Ori, Earl Pearson, Edith Peters, Dottie Porter, Dennis Saylor, Helen Saylor, C. P. Tarkington, Ruth Unkenholz, Walter Wanvig, Robert Wolfe.

On the Job Training for Elementary Teachers

On the job training for elementary teachers will be a part of the Taylor University curriculum with the start of the 1955 fall semester. Students will live in three Indiana communities for eight weeks at the start of the school year to gain practical laboratory experience. This plan replaces the former method of student “practical teaching” in which students took several hours each day from their regular college schedules to gain classroom experience in surrounding elementary schools.

After the eight weeks lab teaching, the students will return to the Taylor campus at Upland, Ind., where they will take a number of concentrated courses to finish out the semester. The students will live in the communities during the eight weeks, be at the schoolroom for observing techniques and take over themselves to learn how it’s done. Schools in Marion, Hartford City and Berne are adopting the plan with Taylor.

The new plan is expected to give students a better idea of what it is to be a part of the community and provide a more realistic teaching experience entirely apart from college studies. Each college student will be under the supervision of a critic teacher in the local school and Miss Jennie Andrews, director of the elementary program at Taylor.

The Indiana State Department of Public Instruction recommends this plan which is in use by many of the larger universities now. Taylor has adopted the plan on somewhat of a trial basis, but the program will be enlarged if the first year’s experience proves satisfactory.

Rediger to Represent
Taylor in North Central Study

Dr. Milo Rediger, dean at Taylor University, will represent the faculty in the North Central Association Liberal Arts Study program on the campus of Michigan State College, July 25-August 19. The study sessions are conducted for mutual benefit of member schools, with the purpose of helping each to solve the problems of its own campus and advance its academic work. Rediger hopes to gain valuable insights for further guidance in the self-study program in which Taylor is currently engaged.

Rediger indicated that Taylor will be chiefly interested in the curriculum studies. The faculty is considering the development of more broad area majors, more courses of general culture which cross divisional and departmental lines and a stronger program of general education, especially in the first two years of college.

The North Central Association is the highest school and college accrediting agency for more than 375 institutions in an area of 19 states. The special study program has been limited to 66 member institutions.

Many colleges and universities are adopting a general education program in four main fields during the first two years: communications, humanities, social studies and natural science.

The North Central Association Study on Liberal Arts Education began in 1938 as a result of a committee report on teacher education. The first conference, a workshop, was held at the University of Minnesota in 1941. The annual workshop is sponsored by the NCA Commission on Research and Service, which has no direct relationship to accreditation.

Dr. Henry Challenges
Class of 1955

Dr. Carl Henry of Fuller Seminary challenged the graduates and others present at the 109th annual commencement with his address on "Christianity and a Dying Culture."

The following comments are condensations and quotes from his address:

"The only message able to provide a barricade between modern culture and its doom is the Christian Gospel which centuries ago rescued the West from the hopeless paganism in which it once lay.

"The audacious message which primitive Christianity preached to a proud, self-confident world was the judgment of a holy God, His offer of redemption in Jesus Christ, and the power of God to reverse or arrest the downward movement of history. That message is still the world's most relevant message, as the modern man continues to wander near the edge of an abyss.

"The Christian movement is once again conspicuously a minority movement in an intensely hostile world. We seem to be only a handful of Christians trying to halt the landslide to paganism. But we are not nearly as much a minority as that early band of Christ's disciples, who ventured out into a wholly pagan world which had never heard the name of Jesus of Nazareth. And we have still the same Holy Spirit, convincing the world of sin and judgment, and of Jesus Christ as its only source of righteousness. Moreover, we are under the same orders as they, the command to preach the Gospel to this generation and to the ends of the earth.

"The Christian Gospel alone stands between the modern world spirit and its decline and doom. Loosed from Christian bearings, the drift of history is inevitably downward. A culture which perseveres in its revolt against God is headed for irrevocable judgment. When God determines to send a rebellious culture to its doom, nobody, not even a prophet, can raise it from the dead. The witess of history is irrefutable on this point. The urgency which surrounds the task of the evangelical movement in this hour is that there are still moments left for repentance. But the hour is drawing late. This generation is face to face with Christ, and it has not yet made a clear and unambiguous decision for Him. America is undergoing some spiritual recovery by fits and spurts, but there is not yet a fundamental change of heart and purpose.”

The number of contributors dropped, however, from 590 to 557 (22.7%). The committee suggested a goal of 40% of the alumni membership contributing not less than $30,000 for 1955-56 and outlined a plan for encouraging all to participate.

He says in part: "The condition of this promise seems even more difficult to reach than the peak of Mount Everest. In a world of sharp competition, sinister temptations to comprise, and world-wide hatreds, who can be pure in heart? History is dotted with the witness of men who have encountered the divine Presence. It becomes evident that when we are cleansed from the confusion of the world, then God can draw aside the curtains and give us glimpses of His glory."
