FALL 1975  VOLUME 12  NUMBER 2
Fifty years is not arbitrarily considered the life-span of a building— even in the United States—unless it is made largely of wood, has obsolete and hazardous wiring, and above all—is used for housing purposes.

This was precisely the case with venerable MCW residence hall. But the building was not given up easily. Last year, as a fire protection measure, students were housed only on the first three floors, with the top floor left vacant. Then great deliberation went into exploring all possible ways to restore the building, or at least retain part of it for some productive use. An engineering study, however, not only showed the building unsafe, but the cost of refurbishing totally unworkable.

So a demolition crew was brought on the scene in September to begin its historic deed. Because dynamiting and steel ball procedures had to be ruled out for safety and technical reasons, the building is being dismantled piece by piece.

After having lived in the Wisconsin side of the dorm with certain characters during the post-war, red Packard era, and also living only a half-block from the dormitory for the past twenty years, I must say that an empty MCW is an eerie, almost ghostly sight. It will take some time to get used to seeing nothing there.

The destruction of MCW definitely is not symbolic of the University today. Rather, the project demonstrates that stewardship has precedence over sentimentality and planning over indecisiveness. The new replacement for MCW reflects the vitality of Taylor whose purpose continues to be timely as well as timeless.

What next?

President Baptista assures us that there is not going to be an automatic rush to make the vacant area totally a parking lot. He has established a Campus Beautification Committee charged with the challenge to draft and recommend ways to enhance the area with shrubbery and trees. There is even the thought of having a small park which would be a welcomed addition.

Commenting on the transfer of all former MCW young women into Taylor’s newest residence hall at the south edge of the campus, Thomas G. Beers ’55, Director of Student Affairs, says “at last I am able to sleep soundly.”
The Inauguration

The Just Shall Live By Faith” is a scriptural cornerstone. This means more than saving faith, however. It also involves a day-to-day sustaining faith—faith in those things which merit our confidence. The Inauguration of President Robert C. Baptista was, more than anything else, a faith-building event—strengthening our faith both in our Lord and in the work and future of Taylor University.

Delegates from a total of 53 colleges and universities attended the ceremony along with many other friends from various areas of the country.

The Inaugural Luncheon also was a memorable event. The banquet room was filled to capacity with 150 guests who heard a significant address by Dr. Robert C. Andringa, Minority Staff Director, United States House of Representatives.

Here we invite you to share in this historic event — the Inauguration of Taylor’s 125th President.

Inaugural Address

“Choose You This Day . . .”
Dr. Robert C. Baptista, President,
Taylor University
Today, we begin a new chapter in the life of Taylor. Preparation for this has made it necessary for us to reassess our commitment and priorities. Taylor’s motto “effectively Christian” has come into new focus as we have reassessed our priorities.

The Presidential Search Committee in its responsibility to find a successor to Dr. Rediger with representation from the board, the faculty, staff, the student body, alumni, and also community representation established basic requirements. These requirements included the facts that the President must be an individual with a personal relationship with Jesus Christ evidenced by a vital Christian witness. This individual must also exemplify Christian maturity and a high moral and ethical representation. Embodied with this must be a working philosophy of Christian higher education.

We believe we have been led by the Holy Spirit to the individual whom God has prepared and chosen for this responsibility. Today as we share in the inauguration of Dr. Robert Baptista, Taylor’s 25th President in her 130th year—we reaffirm our commitment to Jesus Christ, and to the authority of the Word of God. We accept our responsibility with our new president to prepare young people for effective Christian service in the work of the kingdom of God—world-wide.
More Than Emotional Ties
Terry Daniels
Senior Class President

Dr. Baptista, we thank you for the interest in and enthusiasm for students that you have already shown and that we look forward to seeing in the future. I believe that it is your firm conviction that a college is instituted as a tool to nurture young men and women into more complete responsible people, and not as an end in itself. It may verge on the cliche... but once again I affirm that Taylor is people—Taylor is you—not buildings or property. At this time, we the student body, need to challenge ourselves in the mutual agreement that we are taking on here today. If this were a secular school, our ties would be totally economic or legal. At best, emotional. But when we, as a University, dedicate ourselves to Christian principles, new relationships must develop... a community based on Christian commitment must be built on Christian love, and that's where we come in. It is our responsibility to do this building as students to the best of our ability and to the best of our knowledge. Dr. Baptista, I offer our support as students in Christian love to you, and challenge each person here who helps make up part of the Taylor body, the Taylor family, to strive in his own way under your leadership to make this a Spirit-filled and guided community.

Quiet Strength
Dr. Hazel Carruth
Head of the English Department

When Walt Whitman published his first edition of LEAVES OF GRASS, Ralph Waldo Emerson wrote him saying, "I greet you at the beginning of a great career." In Emerson's words, Dr. Baptista, the faculty greets you at the beginning of a great career at Taylor University. In the developing and unfolding pattern for persons and for institutions, God has brought you to this campus. We have already welcomed you as a leader and have come quickly to appreciate your listening ear, your warm Christian spirit, and your quiet strength.

We offer sincere and hearty congratulations to you on this occasion which brings honor to you, but which also places great responsibility upon you. We are grateful for divinely-led persons who assume responsibilities and welcome opportunities of leadership in Christian higher education when the problems posed by the national economy and the public disillusionment with the liberal arts are all but overwhelming. We look to you for inspiration. We want you to challenge us and illicit from us the best service which we can render. We anticipate that you will appreciate our individual strengths, and patiently encourage us as we try to overcome our weaknesses.

Faculty, as well as other constituents of the college, want to see further improvement in facilities, strengthening of academic quality, and a great degree of Christian commitment and growth. We need each other if such personal and institutional quality is to be realized. To this end we willingly pledge you our loyal support and our intelligent cooperation.

We will listen to your counsel, appreciate as many personal and professional contacts as you can manage, and pray for you as you strive to fulfill your dream and ours—for a great new era in the history of Taylor. May God grant you physical health and stamina, a good sense of humor, wisdom, enthusiasm, and solid achievement and satisfaction as you lead us into the future.

Great Expectations
Dr. John Hershey
President, Milton Hershey School

So much depends upon the leader—whether he be the maestro on the concert stage, or the quarterback in the stadium. If we are to have a performance of acclaim—he must be an outstanding leader. If it is true in these categories of life, how much more so is it when we consider the leader of a great institution like Taylor University which is responsible for the destinies of youth. This has been abundantly evident as we have witnessed the progress on this very campus under great executive leadership during the recent years.

Now, President Bob, your remarkable achievements of the past reflecting tireless, dedicated effort, empathy for the feelings of others, deep commitment to Christ, and a dynamic, aggressive spirit of leadership have raised great expectations in the heart of Taylor Alumni.

In behalf of those who have walked the hallowed halls of Taylor, and more specifically—expressing the voice of the Alumni Council and the President of the Alumni Association—I welcome you to the Taylor Family as the captain at the helm. In doing so, I pledge to you our full support in the perpetuation of those principles upon which Taylor was founded, and for the achievement in great measure of the goals which make Taylor uniquely important in the world of higher education today. We pledge our cooperation in your consideration of the problems and concerns that continually arise.

We stand with you in helping to meet the financial needs which are ever increasing. We shall help with dissemination of information which will make more and more people aware of what Taylor is, and what Taylor is going to be. Above all, we pledge to you our prayers for health, wisdom, divine inspiration, and a constant commitment to the principles of our Christian heritage.
Putting A Soul Under The Ribs of Civilization

Dr. Carl H. Lunquist
Chairman of the Board, Christian College Consortium

When Thomas Dewey was running for the presidency of the United States, he appeared at the then radio "Meet the Press" program and a sobering question was asked to him. "In the light of the estimate that about ten years are taken from the life of the president, why is it, Mr. Dewey, that you want to run for the presidency?" And they say that in the radio studio, Mr. Dewey's face clouded over as he thought, and then in a moment of rare frankness, simply answered to his nationwide audience, "I really don't know."

This morning I've come to ask you, Dr. Baptista, why do you want to be president? And as Chairman of the Christian College Consortium, I hope that part of your answer to that question would be that your new leadership role at Taylor University will give you a chance to secure more firmly for America's future the total enterprise of Christian higher education that we enjoy in this nation.

It was many years ago that Thomas Carlisle said something about the role of the church in society that I think is true also of the responsibility of the Christian college. Carlisle said that the role of a college like Taylor and its sister schools is to put a soul under the ribs of civilization.

Now I'm very conscious that the distinguished president of Columbia University only recently said in an address about his business school, that in his viewpoint, it is impossible to teach morality and ethics in a business school, and perhaps it is impossible when you don't have any common frame of reference and single commitment to a moral code such as the Ten Commandments, or the Sermon on the Mount, or the teachings of Jesus, or the writings of the Apostle Paul. But at Taylor, and at schools like Taylor, we have the entire Bible and a common commitment to it that does give us a moral basis for life—and that's one of America's greatest hopes.

In this Bicentennial year when many of our fellow Americans, along with us, are trying to think hard about the enduring values of our national heritage, I can't think of a better place or a better agency to transmit a moral framework within which America can carry out her role as a leader in the world, than an intellectual center like Taylor and its sister schools that revolve around the polar star of Biblical Christian revelation. Not only the business community, but every other structure of society needs to be penetrated by dedicated and professionally competent, and morally sensitive graduates from places just like this.

And I'd like to say from my vantage point of more than two decades in the presidency of a sister college, that there never has been in America a greater need, a greater opportunity, or a greater acceptance of Christian principles in higher education, or of the special contribution that the 150 or so Evangelical colleges of America can make to the 3,000 non-profit colleges and universities that constitute the whole system of higher education with all its pluralism and with all its glory for our nation.

I'm glad that you have come to the role at Taylor, and through it, to a larger role in American Christian higher education, Dr. Baptista. And because I know you, and some of your skills and some of your insights, I see not only a stronger Taylor but a stronger network of Evangelical Colleges and through them, a stronger America.

Silent Partners

Dr. Leland Boren
President, Avis Industrial Corporation

We all know of the superb and excellent leadership and administration that Dr. Baptista is inheriting—and you know, in this world today words so often are so hollow, so our welcome to you, Dr. Baptista, and Mrs. Baptista, and your family—are of heart-felt, sincere concern. As we travel in this world we do have lonely times, and we call upon God to give us the assistance that we need in whatever we might be doing, and there are times in all our lives that we'd like to have somebody as a human being alongside with us, sharing our prayers and our meditation.

Our welcome will prove to you that we will be your silent partners in prayer and in concern, sharing your happiness, sharing your problems and sorrows. We welcome you.

Maintain The Spiritual Thrust

Dr. Billy Melvin
Executive Director, National Association of Evangelicals

I want to remind all of us that for almost 130 years Taylor University has been making a significant contribution to the Christian church. From my perspective, that contribution has centered primarily in helping students to fully grasp what it means to be a disciple of Jesus Christ, and serve Him whatever might be one's profession or calling.

In rather extensive travels and contacts across our nation, and to some extent around the world, I've been a first hand witness to the fact that Taylor's contribution in this regard is a rather large and significant one. Taylor graduates serve with distinction today in medicine, education, law, social work, business, politics, counseling, administration, and many other professions too numerous to mention. And it's there, in the marketplace, that the life-style and Christian testimony of these graduates is making an impact for Christ. Furthermore,
Choose You This Day...

In his Inaugural address, President Baptista asks and answers three fundamental questions.

It was winter 1944—Allied armies, having landed in Normandy several months earlier, were sweeping across western Europe toward the Rhine River and the German capitol of Berlin. Military victory seemed assured and a false sense of security settled over allied troops.

Unexpectedly, through the fog-shrouded Ardennes Forest, Adolf Hitler struck the American lines with most of his military reserves. Ten tank divisions, along with 14 infantry columns, attacked over a 75 mile front held by only five American units. Huge gaps were torn in American lines as the Germans gambled desperately to split the allied forces and to regain the military initiative.

During the Battle of the Bulge, the Belgian city of Bastogne—a key communications center—was held by the American 101st airborne division. Encircled by overwhelming German forces—outnumbered eight divisions to one—almost out of gasoline, ammunition, and medical supplies—the Americans refused to budge in the face of tremendous pressure.

Suddenly, after three days of siege, an unnatural silence fell on the battered city as a German truce team brought an ultimatum to the American commander—"Surrender or face total annihilation." Maj. Gen. Anthony Clement McAuliffe seized a piece of paper—wrote one word—underlined it twice—and finished with an exclamation mark. His response—"NUTS!"

News of the General's reply spread like wildfire through the city and became the rallying cry for one of the finest actions in American military history. The 101st held at Bastogne—the attack was ultimately turned back—an allied victory in Europe was assured.

Private higher education in the United States has gone through a somewhat similar experience. In the golden years of the 1950's and early 60's, we witnessed unprecedented growth and prosperity as measured by student enrollment—construction of campus facilities—degrees earned—and money received and spent. As higher education moved ahead on all fronts, a permanent plateau of prosperity seemed assured.

Suddenly, a new day dawned. Prosperity was replaced by peril. Confidence became confusion. The celebration of victory turned into a struggle for survival. Private higher education was engulfed by hostile forces—buffeted from all sides by campus unrest in many places, raging inflation, escalating costs of operation, new and formidable competition: proprietary schools; community colleges; colleges without walls, recession, increasing governmental demands and control, energy crisis, dislusionment of the public.

We have become an "endangered species." Prophets of gloom predict our untimely, but certain, demise. Many say it is too late for life-saving surgery or transfusion. An institutional euthanasia has been suggested. We hear the call to surrender.

Looking back, for a moment, on military history—as Anthony McAuliffe faced his moment of truth—as he agonized over a decision which had life or death implication for thousands—he had to wrestle with three crucial questions:

1. Who are we?—The question of identity.
2. What are we to do?—The question of mission.
3. How are we to do it?—The question of implementation.

McAuliffe answered this way—

1. Who are we?
   American paratroopers.
The 101st Airborne.
The "Screaming Eagles."
   Never defeated in battle.
2. What are we to do?
   Hold the line.
   Prevent the German breakthrough.
   Never give up.

3. How are we to do it?

   Dig in:
   Conserve our resources.
   Spend our ammunition carefully.
   Keep fighting until reinforcements arrive.

At Taylor University we have faced our moment of decision. We have heard the call to surrender—to raise the white flag—to give up. And our answer has been just as resounding and just as determined as that of General McAuliffe. But the Taylor story does not end there.

As we look at Taylor today, we see a spacious and well-equipped campus—twelve new buildings since 1965—three buildings opened this fall—a chapel/auditorium currently under construction. We see full enrollment with every residence hall room filled to capacity and additional students waiting to get in. We see institutional strength as reflected in financial stability, full accreditation, and the competence and commitment of faculty and staff. We also recognize that the present is only a prelude to opportunities which beckon us in the days just ahead.

As we face the challenge of the future, we turn again to the three basic questions:

   The question of identity—Who are we?
   The question of mission—What are we to do?
   The question of implementation—How are we to do it?

And, as we face these questions, we are confronted with the necessity to identify alternatives, to explore options, to choose.

Who Are We?

Taylor is a private institution of higher learning founded in 1846 as Fort Wayne Female College—at that time, a struggling preparatory school with a few college courses and a multitude of economic problems. Soon men were enrolled and the name was changed to Fort Wayne College in 1855. But the problems persisted. Usually on the brink of bankruptcy, the school survived through the dedicated services of a small group of faculty and staff and the perennial strategy of deficit financing.

Reorganized in 1889 following a severe economic crisis, the school was renamed Taylor University in honor of Methodist Bishop and missionary statesman, William Taylor. The change in status from college to university recognized the temporary acquisition of the Fort Wayne College of Medicine.

A plunge in enrollment and a deteriorating financial condition forced the school to seek a new location—and in 1893 with a gift of ten acres of land and the promise of financial support—the university moved to the town of Upland which happened to be the highest point on the railroad between Columbus and Chicago.

The early years in Upland were not easy—three changes in ownership—two receiverships—failure to achieve academic accreditation—and periodic talks of relocation plagued the struggling institution in the years before World War II. It was a constant struggle for economic survival. Held together by a belief in the cause of Christian higher education and the sacrificial service of a core of dedicated faculty and staff members—the college did survive.

In more recent years, the college has had its share of valley experiences. Two destructive fires—conflict over ultimate location and affiliation—strained campus and community relationships—were faced and overcome. Today Taylor enjoys a stability unprecedented in its 129 year history. Yet, through it all—and here I quote William Ringenberg in his stimulating history of Taylor University—"The identification of the college as an evangelical Christian institution of higher education and the determination of its graduates to use their educational experiences as a means to serve God and man characterized the Taylor of 1971 just as it described the institution in earlier times."

Who are we?
A small liberal arts college.
Old in years—but young in vision and vitality.
A deep religious heritage—yet a fresh and dynamic commitment to our never-changing Lord.
Interdenominational so that we can effectively serve the broad spectrum of evangelical Christianity.
This identity—we have chosen for ourselves.

What Are We To Do?
We are—to provide opportunities for young people to learn—to learn about themselves—about the world in which they live—to learn how to learn and how to use what is learned. We seek to open the windows through which they view the world.

To provide opportunities for young people to know more about their God—
His power and majesty.
His integrity and wisdom.
His concern and love.
His plan and purpose for individual lives.

To integrate the various fields of scholarship with effective faith in Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord.

To hold the love of learning and the love of God in a single context.

To give those who elect a Taylor education the best academic preparation and the most supportive spiritual environment so that they will be prepared to live as effective Christians in a world that is hostile, confused, and yet hungry for a better way.

This mission—we choose for ourselves.

How Are We To Do It?
First—to recognize that we cannot be all things to all people. This means a limitation in curricular offerings and academic opportunity. Not a limitation in quality—but a limitation in quantity.

Second—to manage our affairs so that our Christian commitment is a matter of example, not mere precept. To plan realistically in the light of available and potential resources. To work with diligence—not slothful in any of our educational and business affairs. To be objective in evaluation and tough-minded in decision making. To deal honorably with all men.

We must then identify that uniqueness—those distinctions that mark Taylor as different from the mainstream of private higher education. It is not enough to be just another good school—there must be some special quality which attracts students and constituents alike.

"We actively seek to make New Testament values the personal possession of every student."

Listen to the words of an early trustee who served with President Thaddeus Read around the turn of the century—"Since every university seeks to become distinguished for some specific excellence, let Taylor University be distinguished for the piety and religious fervor of her students and faculty."

This is our distinctive.

This means a deliberate institutional commitment to God as the author of all truth and the giver and sustainer of all things.

This means that those individuals who elect to work here love and respect God's word and God's way and seek to live lives that are transparently Christian.

This means a unique campus lifestyle that goes beyond scriptural admonition and establishes wholesome expectations which provide the atmosphere to carry out our mission most effectively.

This means that we do not compartmentalize religion but seek to penetrate all of learning and life itself with Christian perspectives.

This means that we encourage our people to think Christianly as we actively seek to make New Testament values the personal possession of every student.

This is the way we choose to implement our mission of Christian higher education.

Ours is not an easy task—but what is the significance of the victory if the challenge is too small?

Our determination is to offer the finest in Christian higher education. Our expectations are high—our confidence undimmed—our assurance is in our God who holds all things in His hands and who still rules and overrules in the affairs of men.

I invite you to join me in this exciting venture—this challenging yet rewarding task.

If you are but an acquaintance—grant us our differences—our uniqueness.

If you are a parent, an alumnus, a friend—continue to support us with your understanding, your gifts, and your prayers.

If you are a student—accept our love and concern for you—take advantage of our desire not only to teach but also to disciple so that you will be the man—the woman—that God intends.

If you are a member of the trustee board, the faculty, or the staff—commit yourself anew to the high calling of Christian scholarship and Christian stewardship—to be effectively Christian in all that you do.

As Joshua of old challenged the children of Israel—"Choose you this day whom ye will serve."

We join in his ringing response and pledge—"As for me and this school, we will serve the Lord."
Investment Of The Symbol Of Office

Dr. Lester C. Gerig

Chairman, Taylor University Board of Trustees

Eighty-three years ago just a few yards from where we now stand, a gifted Christian administrator, together with a few colleagues and community leaders, envisioned the transfer of Taylor University from Fort Wayne to a plot of ground on the sound edge of Upland.

Facing Dr. Thaddeus C. Reed was a frontier challenge of hardship and sacrifice—but also a divine imperative to expand the influence of the small school far beyond the humble confines of its only building. He lived to see but a glimmer of his dream fulfilled.

Time has tested Taylor's capacity to endure, the vicissitudes have tested its ability to maintain its true course. The testimony to its strength lies partly in its past which is a monument to character, and partly in its present which is an expression of divine sanction and human dedication. But now we step into the future which holds promise which we believe is equal to the challenge.

The tradition and heritage which comprise Taylor's legacy have been forged across many decades by persons of uncommon commitment and by the blessing of God. These qualities have fashioned a college both of scholarship and of Christian service.

To you, Robert C. Baptista, the Board of Trustees has seen fit to commit the collective memories of our past and the direction of our future. Stalwart men before you have fought the battles of this institution and each has helped to shape its destiny.

We have confidence in your devotion to the ideas for which Taylor lives and we have faith in your courage to take new directions in continuing the venture of education begun long ago.

Under authority granted by the Taylor University Board of Trustees, and in the presence of these witnesses assembled, I hereby induct you into the office of the Presidency of Taylor University with all the rights, privileges and responsibilities pertaining to that office, and I cause you to be vested with the Presidential medallion as a symbol of your position and responsibility.

The mantle is yours. Wear it with a sense of profound stewardship and may God crown your labors with success.
Alumni In The News

Myers Earns Valley Forge Medal

For his exceptional work in engineering the mock Political Convention and other significant programs at the Cocoa Beach Florida High School, Richard Myers has been awarded the Valley Forge Teacher's Medal for 1974. He was cited for making "a notable patriotic contribution to youth in the highest tradition of our free nation." The citation concluded, "Long after this medal is laid away and the language of this citation is forgotten, the values of this awardee's work toward the pursuit of human dignity will live for the future through the lives and actions of boys and girls grown taller and older."

The above information was provided by Nelson Rediger '67, one of Richard's former colleagues at Cocoa Beach, and now Executive Director of the Brookland Plantation Home for Boys in Orangeburg, South Carolina.

Richard Myers is presented with the Valley Forge Award by Bull Moose Convention delegate Magie Jiscott.

Beulah Coughenour Scores Political Upset

Mrs. J. Robert (Beulah Meier '55) Coughenour conquered all the odds and won a seat on the 29-member Indianapolis City-County Council in the November 4 election.

The former Taylor Alumni Council member, whose philosophy of government harks back to the "Jeffersonian concept," waged an unorthodox but effective campaign for the Indianapolis post.

She knocked on doors in 15 of the district's 27 precincts prior to the primary election, not asking what residents wanted from the city, but simply stating her philosophy of government.

Michele White Named Bicentennial Director

Michele White '68, a member of the Taylor Alumni Council, has been appointed director of the Indiana American Revolution Bicentennial Commission.

Announcement of her appointment was made jointly by Governor Otis R. Bowen and former State Senator Walter Helmke of Fort Wayne, Chairman of the Commission.

Michele is serving as the operating head of the agency with responsibility for planning and coordinating Indiana's observance of the 200th anniversary of American independence.

The Screening Committee that selected Michele was impressed with her enthusiasm for the Bicentennial and with her demonstrated ability while serving as Director of Student Volunteer Services at Ball State University.

Mr. Helmke stated, "We are confident she will be able to develop and coordinate Bicentennial programs throughout the state which will involve almost every Hoosier in our nation's 200th birthday celebration."

Michele has an M.A. degree from Ball State and has also done post-graduate work at Loyola University in Chicago, and Anderson College Seminary.

Mrs. Paul Authors Book on Persia

Mrs. Wilson Paul (Doris Atkinson '26) recently co-authored another book called "A Picture of Persia" which will be on the market within a few months.

She and her husband, Dr. Wilson Paul '29, one of Michigan's leading personalities in the performing arts field, were invited by the Iranian government to attend the Shiraz Persepolis Festival of Arts last August. For this widely traveled couple who have taken many trips to numerous countries, this was their third journey to Iran.

Mrs. Paul's last book was a fascinating work "The Navejo Code-Talkers." Dr. Paul has been Director of Michigan State University's concert/lecture series for many years and has been a member of the Taylor University Board of Trustees.
The renewing of old acquaintances was obvious everywhere during Homecoming weekend October 17-19. This lively quintet includes Tom '50 and Marge Sidey, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde '50 Meredith Jr., and Anna Rose Braden.

The Future is Now

With the Inaguration ceremony launching Homecoming weekend one might ask “What do you do for an encore?” There were encores, both literal and figurative.

The Queen Crownining Ceremony, the first in the new Physical Education building, featured an interesting dimension with the fathers of the candidates serving as escorts. Then followed the piano artistry of Peter Nero, who fascinated the festive audience with the virtuosity that is his trademark.

He was, of course, cheered back for encore selections. Although the hour was then late by normal standards, there was yet to be a gala old fashioned ice cream parlor in the Dining Commons. The setting was duly regaled for the occasion and it was obvious that a good time and many calories were had by all.

Then came Saturday. A day jam-packed with athletic and social activities. The day began with a YFC/Campus Life Breakfast under the direction of Gary Dausey '62.

Class Reunions of the five-year reunion classes from 1970 — back to 1905 — were held in the morning as were numerous athletic events. These included women's varsity field hockey and volleyball, and the men's NAIA District Cross Country Meet.

Several academic alumni meetings were also held including the biology alumni and computing center, physics and teacher education graduates.

Prior to the football game the queen and her court were presented. Only the weather left something to be desired — with rain falling most of the day in one of the few inclement weekends this fall.

Following the game, a coffee hour was held in the Student Union followed by the Alumni Banquet in the Dining Commons. A highlight of the evening was the induction of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Baptista into membership in the Alumni Association.

The weekend also included a popular dramatic production “The Roar of the Greasepaint — The Smell of the Crowd” plus an art exhibit.
The Celebration is now scheduling concerts for next year. A few open dates are currently available for late this spring. For information about concert arrangements please contact Mr. Neal Hauser, 124 1/2 West 31st Street, Marion, Indiana 46952.

ROUND ROBIN LETTER WRITERS
A remarkable aspect of Homecoming was the presence on campus of nine ladies who have perpetuated a Round Robin letter for about fifty years. Most of those present are pictured below when Jack Van Vessem, Director of Alumni Affairs, asked them to stand for special recognition. Those present were Irma Dare ’25, Eloise Abbey Fenstermacher ’24, Pharaba Polhemus Shirey ’25, Ella Marie Williamson ’40, Mildred Radaker Wadsworth ’26, Mildred Ortlip Keel ’24, Dorothea Leech Wideman ’24, Kathryn Bieri Sears ’25, and Louise Smith Briggs ’24. Other living participants in the Round Robin letter who were unable to be present are Blanche Rehne Kleinhen ’24, Evelyn Duryea Martin ’27, and Eva Oliver McLaughlin ’25.
she interviewed prospective teachers, held orientation meetings with these student teachers, and placed them in schools with effective supervising teachers. She visited these student teachers many times during their internship, offering helpful suggestions. As a liaison between Taylor and the public schools, she often assisted in teacher education workshops and seminars. Her place of esteem was signified by her election to Pi Lambda Theta and Delta Kappa Gamma, professional honor societies.

Involvement with students also extended to instruction in courses preparing them for student teaching assignments. Her repertoire of experiences for meaningful instruction was broadened by a European study tour in 1962. After study in Scandinavia and England, she pursued an intensive examination of Pestalozzian methods as practiced in Switzerland. In 1968 she was chosen as Professor of the year at Taylor.

Satisfaction

The climax of all of these experiences has been her satisfaction in witnessing students maturing and serving society as effective Christian student teachers and later as teaching alumni.

Herbert G. Lee, a descendant of the family of General Robert E. Lee, came to teach in the Taylor English Department in 1955. A native of North Carolina, he had attended Mars Hill College and received his Bachelor of Science degree from Western Carolina University prior to his initial teaching experience in the public schools of Asheville, North Carolina. Three years of military service with the United States Army Air Force preceded graduate study at the University of North Carolina where he was awarded the Master of Arts degree. He then went to Northwestern University for three years of additional graduate study.

College teaching at the University of North Carolina, Northwestern University, Southern State Teachers College at Springfield, South Dakota, the University of South Dakota at Vermillion, and Drury College in Springfield, Missouri, prefaced his coming to Taylor and helped to build his expertise for making literature enjoyable and a vehicle for character building. His teaching specialties are Shakespeare

Time To Build An Easel

By Dr. Mildred Chapman, Associate Professor of English

Take two lifetimes of diversified, highly effective classroom leadership. Add the permeating flavor of a combined forty-five years of teaching at Taylor University. Layer with love of life, love of people, and love of truth and beauty in every form.

This is Herbert and Jennie Lee, the husband-wife teaching team who became professors emeriti at the close of the 1974-75 school year.

Jennie Andrews Lee came to the Education Department at Taylor in 1951 with twenty-three years of public school teaching and administrative experience. Having received both the Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science degrees plus a certificate in speech from Marion College, she completed a Master of Arts degree at the University of Iowa and did further graduate study at the University of Minnesota and the University of Arizona.

She had been a teacher at several grade levels, a high school principal, and an assistant to a county superintendent of schools in her native Iowa and had gained college teaching experience at Kletzing College in University Park, Iowa, and Bob Jones University in Greenville, South Carolina.

Jennie became Director of Student Teaching at Taylor in 1961 and has been responsible for the development of a very effective student teaching program, which is an ambitious, cooperative venture with many public schools in a wide geographic area. Very active in professional organizations, she was for many years campus sponsor of Indiana's most active Student Education Association and represented Taylor University at a diversity of professional meetings throughout the United States.

As Director of Student Teaching, and the Renaissance period in general plus writing skills development. He instituted the English Proficiency Program at Taylor and gave it leadership throughout his teaching tenure. In 1972 he taught an English travel and study program for Taylor students attending Expo '72 in Dallas, Texas.

During his years at Taylor, Herbert taught occasional evening classes for Marion College and served for ten years as a professor for evening classes at Indiana University—Kokomo campus. The student body at Kokomo chose him for their annual “Amicus” award in 1967. During 1964-65 he enjoyed a year of sabbatical study at Bowling Green University in Ohio. Ten summers were spent as county supervisor for the Burcombe County, North Carolina Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Services at Asheville.

Foreign Travel

The Lees were married in the summer of 1970 and have since lived at 411 Berry Street in Upland. Together they have enjoyed two summers of foreign travel experiences, having visited England, France, Italy, Greece and Egypt. They have also enjoyed numerous trips throughout the continental United States.

Their many shared hobbies include travel, entertaining, and horseback riding. Herbert is a woodworking enthusiast and is much interested in photography. He is avidly reading the books on his personal reading list and has found some time to write. Jennie is involved with decorating, a volume of correspondence, and her world problems study group. She hopes to pursue oil painting again.

Herbert asserts, “Retirement is not as much different as one thinks. Our lives are as busy as ever and are very enjoyable.” He adds, “It’s nice to read without having to stop and grade papers.”

Jennie, who has made six educational consultant trips in six weeks and happily entertained an unending succession of house guests, comments, “I think I’ll have time to get to my oil painting as soon as Herbert builds the easel.”

What people do with their free time is a strong index of their character. Those who gave valuable time to conducting the Phonathons last year certainly revealed something of their priorities and commitments. As volunteers, they received no remuneration, of course; but they did earn the satisfaction that comes only with faithful stewardship and the assurance that they did their part to help assure Taylor's continuing Christian influence.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION FOR EDUCATION ALUMNI relating to

UPDATING AND RELEASE OF TEACHER PLACEMENT CREDENTIALS

1. If you desire to use the services of the TEACHER PLACEMENT BUREAU, you should update your credential file. Credentials more than five years old have little meaning to prospective employers and could be more misleading than helpful.

You may request a PERSONAL DATA form for the purpose of updating your file, or you may submit a recent resume. Letters of recommendation from your past employers should also be added. We recommend that those persons who have received the Master’s Degree register for placement with the graduate degree granting institution. For a small fee, at your request we will furnish that institution with a copy of the credentials on file.

2. In compliance with the requirements set forth in PL. 93-380, “FAMILY EDUCATION RIGHTS AND PRIVACY ACT OF 1974,” it is necessary for the individual to give us written authorization to release his credentials to prospective employers who request them. Please send us a written request to release your credentials to a specific hiring official or a list of schools where you are applying for positions, thereby authorizing us with your signature to release your credentials to employers who may request them. There is a fee charged for each set of credentials requested.
