One of the things that I enjoy the most about our student body at Taylor Fort Wayne is its diversity. There is the obvious diversity of male and female and that of race, but the kind of diversity I’m speaking of is quite different.

We are diverse in age. Many of our students are traditional-age students: 18, 19, 20 years old, but we have a significant number of students who are older—perhaps in their forties or even fifties. When the two are combined in the classroom, they learn from one another in ways that expand upon what a faculty member is able to do. It makes for, I believe, a better learning environment.

I also appreciate the diversity of educational backgrounds. Some of our students come from large public institutions where their graduating class is larger than our entire student body. Some of our students come from small, private Christian high schools and find our size to be very comfortable in comparison to their high schools; a few of our students come from home school environments.

They all meet in one common place—the Fort Wayne Campus—and there they learn and grow to appreciate the differences. It matters little the size of one’s high school, or even for that matter, how many years it’s been since one has been there. What is important is that they come to Taylor Fort Wayne to learn and to grow, educationally, socially and spiritually.

Finally, I appreciate the diversity in future goals. We have students preparing for ministry, students who are going to become teachers, students who are going to become businessmen or businesswomen and others who will be social workers. Together they encourage one another, challenge one another and push one another to think about their professions in the light of Christ’s claim on their lives. In the end, this is really what matters.

Not everyone here is going to go into full-time vocational ministry, but our prayer is that everyone understands his or her responsibility to be a witness no matter what his or her profession. We invite you to pray to this end with us.

This is a diverse place for a lot of different reasons, but it’s part of what makes us who we are. For this diversity, I give thanks.

Dr. Robert Nienhuis
Vice President Fort Wayne Campus
One of the newest components of the Fort Wayne Campus' urban focus is the establishment of the Center for Justice and Urban Leadership. A Center committed to urban engagement through education, research, agency services and communications.

The purpose of the Center is to train and develop justice and urban leadership in the advancement of community interventions through partnerships between the University and the urban community. The design of the Center incorporates already in place Taylor programming which is designed to address the problems of crime and other urban issues that affect our communities from a Christian perspective.

The Center’s full-time director, Dr. W. Thomas Beckner, is a nationally recognized teacher and trainer of prison ministry professionals and volunteers who has presented seminars in more than 40 cities across America. A former prison chaplain, for several years he directed a very active prison ministry which developed model training programs for private-sector correctional chaplaincies.

The American Chaplaincy Training School (ACTS)
Jail administrators, community leaders and prison and jail chaplains annually receive intensive training in the development, improvement and management of correctional and chaplaincy programs. The training assists leaders in improving their problem solving and program assessment skills. The intensive curriculum offers introductory or advanced training sessions which are conducted for one week each summer. On June 8-13, 1997, TUFW headquartered the 13th annual American Chaplaincy Training School.

The Passages Program
The Samuel Morris Urban Youth Passages program is built around the legacy of Samuel Morris, a young African prince who came to Fort Wayne to study at Taylor University with the burning desire to grow and learn, in spite of obstacles and adverse circumstances. This youth leadership program provides scholarships to 25 at-risk students seeking to make their way through a potentially difficult childhood.

The Paul Clarke Foundation awarded a $63,000 grant to Taylor University to underwrite the expenses of the Passages Program.

Community-Oriented Policing (COPS)
The City of Fort Wayne Police Department and Taylor University will receive $545,857 to implement a Regional Community Policing Institute housed on the TUFW campus. This is the fifth COPS grant given by the U.S. Department of Justice and will provide training for police departments and government agencies in other cities that want to set up the Fort Wayne model of community-oriented policing.

This is the first time "COPS" will be housed at the Taylor campus, and it will involve Taylor University staff as well as the police staff. Dr. Robert Nienhuis said, "Taylor is delighted to be able to partner with the City of Fort Wayne and particularly the Fort Wayne Police Department in this grant and in the training of police officers who will be a part of the grant. Because of the benefits that community policing has brought to the Fort Wayne community, we are pleased to be able to share this approach with other communities." The program will offer preliminary training to police departments and city government agencies in programs at the two Taylor campuses.
The apartment standing at 2855 Millbrook Drive looks like any other in Brookmill—unassuming and quiet. In the afternoon, this all changes. Children begin to crowd around the back window of the house waiting for a special snack to be given out. Thus begins another day at Project Incentive.

Recognizing the need for positive influence, the Project Incentive program focuses on inner city children between the ages of three to sixteen from Brookmill and Miami Village neighborhoods of Fort Wayne. The program incorporates both fun and challenging activities to assist children with academics, self-confidence and the building of friendships. Activities include: lessons, small group time with project leaders, choir, computer skills, dress-up, reading club and outdoor games.

Project Incentive is an outreach ministry that clearly has the Taylor University influence. The combined efforts of Mary Jane Schramm g91TUU, Jenny Jackson g96 and Christian Perona g95TUU give life and leadership to the program. Mary Jane is the overall coordinator for all Project Incentive programs in the area. Christian works with the preschoolers teaching them basic tasks such as using scissors and tying their shoe laces. Jenny coordinates elementary (kids club) through middle school (club pride) programs.

The rest of the Project Incentive staff, volunteers as well as paid staff, consists largely of Taylor students from both campuses. Recent and current staff include (Taylor Fort Wayne students): Lauren Bour, Adam Carrigan, Amy Duplain, John Eckrote, Deb Fox, Vitaly Franko, Shani Gray, Heather Gunderson, Amy Mendenhall, Sarah Miretti, Matt Powell, Dawn Rinkenberger, John Spence, Jim Taylor and Mandy Waters. Diane Carlson, Kristin Long and Jennifer West serve the inner city kids program as well and are Taylor Upland graduates. The staff assists with preschool through junior high tutoring and teaching, managing small group responsibilities, and assisting with snack time and games.

Project Incentive is filled with challenges and it takes a dedicated staff to come back, day after day. As in any job which deals with children, there tends with one another. When the staff is able to control the outbreaks of fighting with kind words and gentle arms, results are very rewarding. Jenny Jackson shares, “I know I’m there to make a difference in the kids’ lives. What makes it all worthwhile is seeing the little changes happen.” Sarah Miretti agrees, “When the kids turn around and compliment you instead of swearing at you, you begin to feel the difference you are making in their lives.”

Unfortunately it is not uncommon for children who attend the center to come from backgrounds filled with violence and hate. They are not immune to the love which is shown by the workers and volunteers. On average, 40 children attend the center on a daily basis. The dedication, knowledge and love by staff and volunteers demonstrates to the children that there is much more to life than anger and fighting. Daily the love of God is seen through the compassion and ministry of Taylor students.

The children who attend are given new insight on how to handle love, hate and anger through the examples the staff give through their lives. The kids are able to see that no matter how many times they may stumble and fall, the workers of Project Incentive will always be there to lift them back up with words of encouragement or even a simple hug. The staff does not offer sugar coated answers to children who face difficulties in their lives. But the one thing they can offer is their love.
Helping Hands for Hurting Hearts

The Social Work Profession

Social work is not just service to those on welfare. Social work is service to young and old, individuals and families, even groups of people or neighborhoods or whole communities. Social work is service to people like you when the bottom falls out and you did not know it was even loose.

Social work is a professional activity which intervenes in society on behalf of the client. It is more than food stamps or providing shelter from the streets. It is about people—people helping people.

People's needs are greater than just food or shelter; emotional, psychological, and spiritual needs are of significance as well. When a family's home burns down or a community deals with a natural disaster or when someone says goodbye to a loved one who has lost the battle to cancer, social workers step in to help the hurting people heal. Learning to grieve and cope with the loss is an essential step to getting back on track. It is also a very valuable tool in which social workers are trained to help their clients.

Taylor Fort Wayne's newest major, social work, is designed to prepare students for a career as a beginning professional generalist practitioner. A generalist practitioner provides the client assistance in living and linking him or her to the resources he or she needs for improved quality of life. A social worker is in effect the practical response to Jesus' command in Matthew 25 to meet the needs "of the least of these brothers."

With the needs of each client being so diverse, Christian social workers are prepared through the Taylor social work program to integrate faith and practice based on a Christian liberal arts foundation. Students are trained to integrate the knowledge base regarding human behavior and the social environments, social policy, social research and social work practice at a beginning level; demonstrate understanding of difference based on gender, ethnicity, religious creed, sexual orientation and age; and link people with the systems that provide them with resources, services and opportunities. Their preparation extends beyond the classroom as they are required to get "hands-on" experience in a junior practicum setting and spend an entire semester in their senior year performing an internship.

"Social work is... about people—people helping people."

Practicums and internships range from hospital and nursing home facilities to educational settings to charitable organizations. And in a city like Fort Wayne, opportunities for studying social workers abound.

The social work major makes its debut this fall. The major was originally intended to be offered at Taylor Fort Wayne in 1998, but by the persistence of two TUFW students, the major will be offered a year earlier than originally anticipated. "I really feel that as Christians in a Christian university, we need to be prepared to meet the needs of hurting people in a practical way, inside of the church as well as in society. I feel called to do mission work. Right here at home (United States) and this is the best way I feel I can do that--as a social worker. Serving God's people in a way that meets the needs of people and will impact their lives in a way that does not offend. Letting the world know we really care, putting our faith into action, is one of the most effective ways I know we can share Jesus with people who are hurting. That's what I plan to do," explains Amy Duplain, junior social work major.

Information Applications Minor

The time to prepare for the job market is now! And Taylor Fort Wayne can help prepare students and better their resumes with one of the newest additions to her academic offerings— a minor in information applications.

The minor consists of a 21 credit core of systems science, computer science, mathematics and statistics courses specifically designed to prepare students for the modern workplace. It will provide students with computer technology and information management skills that go beyond simple computer competence to the level of information specialist.

The minor is offered for all majors to augment any liberal arts program with a career thrust in information and information management.
Taylor Tomorrow

"We want to approach it (the campaign) being mindful of the Lord's timing and His blessing on all that we do."

The Taylor University future will be greater than her past. The vision Taylor Tomorrow will focus on the commitment to Christ of a community of faculty and students who serve the Lord through rigorous scholarship and a life of service to men and women in Christ's name.

Important changes must take place on the Taylor campuses in Fort Wayne and Upland to provide students of Taylor Tomorrow with the facilities and resources they will need to fulfill their educational mission. Taylor Tomorrow is a $75,000,000 capital campaign to propel Taylor University beyond her 150th anniversary and into the 21st Century. Taylor is the first evangelical Christian college to reach this important milestone while remaining faithful to her founding purpose. By God's grace, Taylor University will celebrate her bicentennial in 2046 with recognition of the faithfulness of this generation. Investment in Taylor Tomorrow assures the future will be even better than the Taylor of yesterday or today.

In the same manner that Jesus Christ is "the same yesterday, today and forever," Taylor University seeks to be constant and true while adapting to the timely needs of intellectual examination. The foundation is sure; the buildings are ever changing; the objectives are eternal.

Long-term campaign goals include a new chapel/auditorium on the Fort Wayne campus and a new facility for dining, student activities and student government. Provisions for the maintenance, upgrade and replacement of existing facilities and equipment on both campuses are also among the long-term campaign goals.

Taylor University provost Daryl Yost said, "On the Fort Wayne campus we have a very high need for additional classroom and library space." And according to Jerry Cramer, director of the Taylor Tomorrow Campaign, the additional library and classroom space will have a strengthening effect on the Fort Wayne campus, which has great potential for growth. "It makes a strong statement to the community in Fort Wayne and to Taylor University," said Cramer.

Cramer insists that the success of the campaign lies foremost in the Lord's blessing. "Certainly we want to emphasize the spiritual element of the campaign," he said. "We want to approach it being mindful of the Lord's timing and His blessing on all that we do."

Packer is Sangwoo Youington Chee Professor of Theology at Regent College in Vancouver. He is author of books: Evangelism and the Sovereignty of God and Knowing God. Small group discussions, a variety show, devotions and communion worship service filled the balance of the retreat which provided meaningful avenues of both reflection and renewal as the faculty prepared for the start of another successful academic year.

New Faculty

Dr. Michael Cook has been appointed assistant professor of psychology. Cook has held a variety of counseling, ministry and instructor positions throughout the past 10 years. He received his Ph.D. in psychology and counseling, and an M.Div. in pastoral ministries from New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary; and a B.S. in sociology from Albany State College, Albany, Georgia.

Reaccreditation

The purposes and mission of Taylor University are proven through review by an outside accreditation organization. Taylor underwent such a review in February by the North Central Association (NCA). While official notice is not expected until early fall semester, the review team has recommended Taylor for unqualified reaccreditation through the 2006-07 academic year. Membership in the NCA ensures that Taylor is adequately fulfilling the standards for accredited institutions of higher education and that Taylor is remaining true to its mission. Taylor was first accredited with the NCA in 1947 and has since maintained continuous accreditation with the organization.

A 22-member steering committee, chaired by Dr. Steve Bedi, associate vice president for academic affairs, and composed of Taylor faculty and staff, representative of both campuses, prepared materials for the review. The review process involved meetings and interviews with board members, key administrators, faculty and students from both campuses.

The NCA review team unanimously agreed that Taylor University should be recommended for unconditional reaccreditation for the next ten years. The rationale for this decision was based upon the review team’s observation that the Taylor mission permeates every aspect of the institution and that the commitment to whole-person education is being fulfilled. The team reported that Taylor had adequate facilities, personnel and financial resources to accomplish its purposes. They also noted Taylor’s strong vision for the future, its commitment to long-range planning, the sense of integrity present at all levels of the University, the strengthening of the University through the Fort Wayne campus and the program of student support services.

Established in 1895, NCA is an accrediting organization for elementary, secondary and postsecondary institutions serving schools in nineteen states. Through the Commission on Institutions of Higher Education, the NCA monitors member organizations, involving educators from these schools in all review and decision making processes.

Graduation

Fifty-four young men and women received bachelor’s and associate’s degrees from the University during graduation ceremonies. Dr. Dwight Jessup, vice president for academic affairs and dean at the University, was the featured speaker. His commencement address, “Connecting Belief and Behavior,” was based on Steven Garber’s book, Fabric of Faithfulness.

From its beginning, the Fort Wayne Campus student newspaper, The Express, has been the talk of the campus. It has received rave reviews on and off campus. It received a first place award from the American Scholastic Press Association based on its high achievement of overall example of a scholastic publication in format, content and presentation. The competition was open to yearbooks, newspapers and magazines in the scholastic arena. The Express was also presented a mark of excellence award in the category of best periodical student newspaper from the Society of Professional Journalists.
Samuel Morris Scholars Program

The mission of the Samuel Morris Scholars Program is to reward recent high school graduates who have achieved success over socioeconomic and education challenges, so that these Christian young people can matriculate and successfully complete a four-year collegiate experience at Taylor University.

The 23 students in this summer's Samuel Morris Scholars Program quickly developed friendships and learned that team work is important in the college experience. The program was developed to provide academically, financially or socially challenged students an opportunity to gain a Christian higher education who would otherwise not be able to attain such an experience. The scholars were on campus for a six-week summer bridge program which eased students' transition between high school and college. Scholars attended and received credit for college courses and participated in group activities. They were eager to learn and worked hard in their classes, and will be an asset to both college campuses. Following are testimonies from the scholars about the summer program:

"Neither one of my parents graduated from high school and when I became a Christian I decided to go to a Christian college. When we all first got to Taylor we poured out our hearts to everyone. And all of us told each other a little bit about our backgrounds. And I don't think anybody is the same anymore. It's only been a few weeks. We care about each other. We've all grown like a family. What I hope to get out of Taylor is a Christian aspect of the world and be the kind of Christian and disciple that the Lord wants me to be.” - Brandy Phillips

"It's been a very fun experience. I'm glad I had the opportunity to be a part of this. It's helping me out spiritually and academically. It's also helped me become a stronger Christian. I look forward to getting involved with leadership positions and help others to grow in the same areas I have.” - Alan Jones

"Taylor is a tremendous aid in my lifelong commitment to Christ. Not just the institution itself, but the students [who] never fail to encourage me to seek first God's kingdom.” - Jennifer Williams

Practical Ministry

The mission of Taylor University is to integrate one's faith with learning, and that is just what Taylor students are doing! Whether in the classroom or in a field experience, students are combining their knowledge and skills with their faith, showing the world that it is possible to have Christian ethics in the work force.

Professor Mark Vermilion's public relations interns spent their summers gaining academic credit toward their public relations majors while working in areas as diverse as this country's inner cities to the international level. Five of this summer's public relations student interns served in Taylor's backyard...the Fort Wayne inner city. Their field experiences range from youth/delinquent programs at the YWCA to the Fort Wayne Wizards Baseball team. An additional four students served in missions organizations in Washington D.C.; the Philadelphia area; Denver; and Fresno, California. One student got the inside scoop as he worked in the Christian music industry in Tennessee, and two gained public relations experience abroad in Argentina, South America; and Toronto, Canada.

Other students have found practicum and internship experiences in the past in public relations firms, newspapers and publishing houses, city and political offices, hospitals, television stations, educational institutions, and many mission-minded organizations.

Credits-In-Escrow

High school students who wish to supplement or enrich their secondary school program may enroll on a space available basis for fall and spring semesters. Full college credit is awarded for all courses satisfactorily completed according to the University's established requirements. Credits earned are held until the student graduates from high school and may be transferred to any college without a penalty charge. For more information contact the office of admissions at 1-800-233-3922.
Dodge has over 14 years of experience in higher education including nine years in postsecondary encouragement initiatives through the Indiana Career and Postsecondary Advancement Center and the State Student Assistance Commission of Indiana. (The major initiative he directed during those years was Indiana's 21st Century Scholars Program, a program designed to improve the educational success of low-income students through early intervention, support and tuition assistance. The program received state and national recognition for its success.) He received a Ph.D. from Indiana University, a juris doctorate from the Indiana University School of Law, an M.A. from Ball State University and a B.A. from Taylor University, Upland.

Belknap has most recently served as interim director of admissions and now returns to the position of director of financial aid, a post he held for five years under Fort Wayne Bible College. He served the campus from 1970-1978 and returned to the Fort Wayne campus in 1995 as information resources coordinator.

Glassie is a recent graduate of Taylor Fort Wayne. She has a vested interest in the goings-on around campus as she serves as a member of the Fort Wayne alumni council. She has spent the past two years working in various positions and is pleased to return to her alma mater as an admissions counselor and share with prospective students in Northern Indiana, greater Chicago area and Michigan about her experiences on campus.

Bedwell, a 1997 public relations and business administration graduate of TUFW, has joined the staff and will be responsible for on-campus visitations.

Frye has served in higher education, in the role of enrollment management, for over fifteen years at Taylor University, Upland, Indiana and at Indiana Wesleyan University, Marion, Indiana. He returns to Taylor to serve on the Fort Wayne campus as associate vice president for enrollment management. He has a master of arts degree in counseling psychology from Ball State University and a bachelor of science degree in social work from Taylor University, Upland.

Jones comes to Taylor Fort Wayne after serving for five years as the coordinator of the 21st Century Scholars program in Gary, Indiana. Jones received her bachelor of arts degree from Indiana University Northwest and has completed graduate course studies at IUN and Purdue Calumet. Jones has been active as a motivational speaker and literacy volunteer, and has received the designation of Sagamore of the Wabash by Evan Bayh, former governor of Indiana.

Newman graduated from the University after having spent time on both campuses as a student. He has served the University for two years in information services on the Upland campus and has recently joined the Fort Wayne campus to serve as manager of the department.

Rowland is a 1997 TUFW graduate who majored in pastoral ministries. He is very excited to be serving the University that helped train him for a lifetime of service to the Lord. His position as admissions counselor will take him to central Indiana and Ohio as he recruits prospective students.
Wheels for the World

Author and radio personality Joni Eareckson Tada made a special appearance in Fort Wayne on June 21, at the Allen County War Memorial Coliseum Expo Center. She was the guest speaker at a "Wheels for the World" Kickoff Rally presented by WBCL Radio.

"Wheels for the World" is an outreach program of "Joni & Friends" (JAF Ministries). The Christian organization collects and refurbishes wheelchairs and other mobility equipment and then distributes them internationally. There are over 500 million disabled people around the world and "Wheels" provides a means for used but serviceable wheelchairs to be passed on to those in need.

The projected goal to raise $150 mobility was surpassed as 415 aides were actually donated through the WBCL Likewise project. Thank you to all of you who donated to this worthy cause!

The month-long event was designed to encourage and uplift physically-challenged people in this area. Joni is a quadriplegic who speaks from experience, directly and optimistically, to physically-challenged people all over the United States.

"Joni & Friends" (JAF Ministries) deliver wheelchairs and Bibles overseas.

Community School of the Arts

The Community School of the Arts serves the Fort Wayne community through offering instruction, performance and service in music and other arts-related disciplines to children, youth and adults. This summer, CSA provided opportunities to 43 children, grades 3-8, to experience the arts in a hands-on learning environment in a one-week, day camp setting both to those who were just beginning their knowledge of the arts and to those who were more experienced as well.

Conferences

The Fort Wayne Campus conference program has experienced growing pains over the last year. From one-day seminars to week-long overnight camps, TUFW is pleased to share her friendly campus atmosphere and cozy residential setting with off-campus guests. The greatest influx of guests are hosted in the summer months. Sports and cheerleading camps, youth groups, band camps, wedding and church receptions, religious convocations, training schools, homeschool fairs, law camps and neighborhood groups are among the nearly 1500 people who called TUFW their home away from home for a short period of time.

Lester C. Gerig: Christian Gentleman and Business Leader

Dr. Lester C. Gerig, 86, trustee emeritus, passed away Friday, August 1, 1997.

Dr. Jay Kesler wrote about Gerig, "A Christian gentleman and business leader, Les moved Taylor University to a new level of professional management and excellence. He recognized the need for a partnership between clergy, educators and the business community. I credit Les with building the foundation that has allowed Taylor University to become the institution that it is in the 1990's. His legacy is among the greatest contributions made to 150 years of Taylor University history."

"Dr. Gerig was a man ahead of his time. He was a visionary with a heart to serve God and His Kingdom. He was tireless in his efforts to make Taylor University everything that God had intended it to become," reflected Dr. Daryl Yost, provost of the University.

Since 1955, Gerig had served on the Taylor University Board of Trustees of which he was chairman for 17 years. He was an active supporter of public and community service, serving on almost two dozen boards and executive committees, most of them in the Fort Wayne community.
Grandparents' Day

The first ever Grandparents' Day was held on Taylor's campus at the end of April. It was an event to honor Taylor grandparents, many of whom have had a vital Christian influence on current students. The day was a way Taylor could give "credit where credit is due" to some very important people.

"Most grandparents, if they ever get to campus, do not come until graduation. Having an official Grandparents' Day gave them the opportunity to experience Taylor at work with their grandchildren," said Priscilla Wynkoop, director of parent programs. Over 400 grandparents visited campus from over 15 states. For those students whose grandparents could not attend the day, a phone bank was provided where they could call their grandparents, free of charge, for a five-minute call.

Highlights of the day included: chapel, class visitation and a special reception in the Galleria where Dr. Kesler autographed and gave away copies of his book, Grandparenting: the Agony and the Ecstasy.

Tales to Tell

All who enjoy the writings of C.S. Lewis, George MacDonald, Owen Barfield, Dorothy Sayers, J.R.R. Tolkien and Charles Williams are invited to Taylor Upland's first colloquium on Lewis and Friends, November 13-15, 1997. Special guests include: Earl Palmer, author and pastor, University Presbyterian Church, Seattle; Marjorie L. Mead, associate director, Wade Center, Wheaton College; Bruce Edwards, author and professor, Bowling Green State University; Jay Kesler, author and president, Taylor University. Special events include: Friday night banquet, dramatic portrayal of C.S. Lewis by professional actor David Payne, full production of Shadowlands by the Taylor Theatre Department, tour of the Edwin Brown Collection of Lewis and friends' first editions, manuscripts and artifacts. For further information call Dr. Richard Hill, 1-800-882-3456.

Breaking Ground

April 18, 1997, marked the day of groundbreaking for the new Samuel Morris Hall on Taylor University, Upland's campus. It is the first visible fruit of the Taylor Tomorrow Campaign. Construction is scheduled for completion by August 1, 1998, and will be ready for occupancy that fall. With Taylor's emphasis on "whole person education," the residence hall is a vital part of the students' learning experience. "The residence hall is rooted in community, steeped in the tradition of the past and full of promise for the future," said Dick Gygi '67, Taylor University board member.

From 1 to r: Dr. Jay Kesler, Mrs. G. Roselyn Kerlin, Dr. Dick Gygi, Dr. Daryl Yost, Mr. Gene Rapp and Mr. Jerry Cramer break ground for the new Samuel Morris Hall.

The new residence hall will house 280 male students and will be fully air-conditioned and wired for telecommunications systems, including Internet access. The hall will allow the old Morris Hall and the West Village modular units to be dismantled.

While most of the brick and mortar projects at Taylor receive some form of endowment, residence halls such as the new Samuel Morris Hall, are not endowed. Project funding will come from a combination of capital campaign monies and a $4 million bond issue. The total cost for the residence hall, including the demolition of the existing residence hall and modular units is projected at $8.2 million.

Dr. Kesler says the building's name, Samuel Morris Hall, speaks of Taylor's history as an institution committed to world missions and cross cultural understanding. It speaks of Taylor's desire to foster racial reconciliation and to encourage the pursuit of holiness and life in the Spirit. It also suggests Taylor's desire to welcome students from disadvantaged backgrounds. "Samuel Morris was poor," Kesler states. "Taylor will always be a place that welcomes the poor." This is the third structure to be named after Samuel Morris. The first was a frame building that sat behind Swallow Robin Residence Hall, and the second was the current Sammy Morris Residence Hall.

The first event held on Taylor's campus was a vital Christian gathering. It was organized by the student leadership to give some very special recognition to the grandparents of the students.

"Most grand parents, do grandparents have a vitally important role in the lives of their grandchildren. They have given them life, and they want to see them grow." - Christina Beckwith Sophomore

Taylor University has benefited me greatly during my time here. I have been stretched academically and spiritually. The professors and staff have been outstanding. They are always willing to help. Many opportunities for Christian growth and outreach in the community help make Taylor University great. I recommend Taylor to anyone who truly wants to grow.
- Richard Carpenter Senior

As a student at Taylor, I have gained wisdom, good relationships, and a life wholly devoted to Jesus Christ. The strong emphasis on community has really helped me to get out of my comfort zone, and experience God's love for Ft. Wayne. I am truly blessed to be a small part of this University.

The thing I love most about Taylor Fort Wayne is the faculty. They see the students as friends, and not just "faces in the crowd." I know that my professors are always available and interested in what I have to say. There have been many times that I have gone into a professor's office and he or she has stopped everything to sit and talk with me. It means so much to know they care.

- Erin Yazel Sophomore

Relationships are what I value most at Taylor Fort Wayne. I have attended another college and was pleased to find that the professors at Taylor University Fort Wayne Campus don't just take an interest in my studies, but they care about me personally. And the friendships I've made here are the best I've ever known.

- Karen Tilkaran Junior

I feel that from the first day that we started here, we've all made a 180 degree turn. We came out of some of the problems we've had. We learned how to grow together as one instead of having different cliques here. Everybody is one big family.

The first event held on Taylor's campus was the grandparent visitation. The director of admissions and alumni relations, John Gail Stivers, welcomed the students. He explained that more than 15 states and 1500 grandparents attended the event on April 15. The grandparent visitation was a unique opportunity for students to share their experiences with others and to build a sense of community. The event was held at the Center for the Arts and featured performances by the Taylor University orchestra, band, and choral groups. The grandparent visitation was a special time for students to connect with their family and friends from across the country.

Highlights of the grandparent visitation included a special luncheon, a tour of the campus, and a grandparent reception. The event was attended by more than 1500 grandparents from across the United States. The grandparent visitation was a special time for students to connect with their family and friends from across the country.

I'm a foster child and the Morris Scholarship is the only way I could ever plan on going to college. I really like college because this is a totally new experience and I wake up everyday wondering "Wow I'm in college. I made it. I've graduated. I'm in college!" My plans include becoming a better journalist so others can see Christ through me.

- Jennifer Munns

Morris Scholar

I'm the first in my family to ever go to college. I chose Taylor because it's Christian and it has the Morris Scholarship. In the next four years I want to major in sociology and go on to become a Christian counselor, helping Christians and non-Christians see the Lord more clearly.

- Megan Wood

Morris Scholar

I'm glad I had the opportunity to be a Morris Scholar. It's helping me out spiritually and academically. It's helping me learn a lot about God because I'm not a strong Christian. It seems like since the first day we were here we've just gelled together and it's helping us grow together as a family.

Grand

The first event held on Taylor University's campus, the grandparent visit, opened to some very enthusiastic grandparents.

"Most grandparents, do not have a chance to visit their grandchildren on the university campus," said David Taylor, director of the grandparent program. "Having an opportunity to give them a glimpse of Taylor's campus is an opportunity they don't get very often." Grandparents from all over the United States were able to call and charge their visits to the campus.

Highlights of the events included class visits, where grandparents were able to experience life on the campus and in the Galleon, and book presentations, such as "Grand the Ecstasy." All who attended had the opportunity to meet Lewis, Barfield, and Charles Taylor.

Lewis and I were able to have a private conversation with Lewis and I 1997. Special event was a dinner with author L. Mead, author of "The Center," and cyclist, Ed Edwards, author of "Forming the Body of Christ." The dinner was held at the University of Fort Wayne.

Charitable Gift Annuity

WITH THE BULLISH STOCK MARKET NOW IS THE TIME TO INVEST IN A TAYLOR UNIVERSITY GIFT ANNUITY

The charitable gift annuity is among the oldest, simplest and most popular methods of making a deferred charitable gift. An annuity is a combination of a gift and an investment, whereby, in exchange for a transfer of cash or marketable securities, the William Taylor Foundation will contractually guarantee to pay a specified annuity amount to the donor and/or another beneficiary for life.

For further information please contact Joe Updegrove, associate director, William Taylor Foundation. 1-800-882-3456, ext. 5144.

Updegrove Transfers to William Taylor Foundation

Joe Updegrove, a name associated with the Fort Wayne campus for the past 22 years, has changed titles and locations. As of July 1, Joe is the associate director of the William Taylor Foundation, located on the Upland campus.

For 22 years, while raising funds for the annual fund, Joe has built relationships with alumni and friends. Because of his loyalty and the trust he has established, Joe has relocated to the William Taylor Foundation and will be focusing on estate planning for alumni and friends of the Fort Wayne campus.

Joe will be contacting and approaching Fort Wayne alumni and friends of 55 years or older, and helping them plan their wills, trusts and annuities. And, according to Joe, his greatest asset is the continual correspondence and personal contacts that he has maintained with the alumni and friends of Fort Wayne during the past two decades. "We have built a rapport over the years, and I have kept in close contact with them either by a letter or phone call. They know me and know they can trust me."

Sherri Harter, director of development and university relations for the Fort Wayne campus reflects on Joe's new responsibilities, "Joe has a gift of relating to people, and it is exciting to see him use his gift in helping our constituents meet a special need--estate planning. Joe's efforts have a tremendous impact on the individuals he will be working with and on the future of Taylor Fort Wayne."

Mortensen Named to Development Post

Michael Mortensen has been appointed to the position of associate director of development on Taylor University's Fort Wayne campus. A 1991 graduate of Taylor University, Mortensen returns to the University after having spent the past six years in the insurance/financial world, working for Shelton Financial Group, Ossian, Indiana, and providing marketing coordination for three health and rehabilitation centers in Wells County, Indiana.

"Exciting things are happening on the Fort Wayne campus," Mortensen explained. "Considering the work my parents do here in the inner city and my love for Taylor and its mission, I'm so pleased to be a part of the development team using my interpersonal skills and my marketing experience to raise money to help Taylor be affordable for all qualified students. I'm looking forward to meeting new and existing donors and sharing with them the excitement of Taylor Fort Wayne."
Distinguished Alumni

Gerald and Violet Ringenberg

Blessed is the school that has alumni who not only serve in their chosen field but volunteer their time and efforts to their alma mater without any thought of remuneration or recognition.

The Ringenbergs’ service to this campus began 30 years ago when they moved to Woodburn, IN, to pastor a church in that town. They involved themselves in the activities of the "Friends of Fort Wayne Bible College." It would appear that Violet held every office possible in the organization. In addition, they raised thousands of dollars during the annual alumni phonathon.

The Ringenbergs have always had a heart for students. Their home was always open to students on Sundays for most of the 1970’s. Since 1967, Violet has had 85 prayer students for whom she has prayed and encouraged during their college years. She continues to send cards to 179 of these former students, their spouses and children.

Gerald and Violet’s love for and commitment to Fort Wayne Bible College rubbed off on their children, as all of them are graduates of the College.

Richard Alvis

Rick and Julie left a few days after graduation to travel to Evansville, IN, for a summer ministry to inner-city children at Camp Reveal. It turned out to be a tenure of thirteen years.

Professor Sterling Demond, a Christian camping enthusiast, had a great impact on Rick during his college days. As a consequence, Rick and his wife, Julie, spent 13 years of service with the Evansville Rescue Mission, the last seven as executive director of all the missions’ ministries.

In 1990, Rick and his family moved to Indianapolis to become executive director of Wheeler Mission Ministries. A staff of 55 men and women coordinate the program which includes: counseling, evangelism and discipleship, a women’s shelter, a thrift store, preventative programs for 1000 children and over 200 families, a community center, and a 280-acre camp.

Rick and Julie both serve in leadership roles in their local church. In addition, Rick is vice-president of the International Union of Gospel Missions, a board member of Advocates for the Homeless in Indianapolis and a member of Rotary, International.

Alumni Reception

The biennial General Conference of the Missionary Church was held in Fort Wayne at the Grand Wayne Center, July 15-18, 1997. People from all districts of the Missionary Church attended.

Hundreds of those who attended were alumni of Fort Wayne Bible College, Summit Christian College and now Taylor University, Fort Wayne campus. The alumni/church relations office hosted a reception for all alumni and friends after the Tuesday night evening service. The 225 people who attended heard a campus update from Dr. Robert Nienhuis, vice president of TUFW; a testimony from Rev. Harold Graham, current non-traditional student; and a pastoral ministries program update from Dr. David Biberstein, pastoral ministries professor. It was a great time of fellowship, reunion and information about the future of Taylor Fort Wayne. More than 30 faculty and staff (most of them FWBC alumni) were present to serve as hosts and hostesses. With Bible faculty that are all members of the Missionary Church, Taylor Fort Wayne maintains a close relationship with the denomination and continues to prepare men and women for Christian ministry.

A FOND FAREWELL
to Bill Gerig

A fond farewell is a curious thing. Perhaps the expression "fond farewell" should even qualify as an oxymoron. The fond part is easily expressed; the farewell part is very difficult...especially when the fond farewell is being given to our dear friend, Bill Gerig.

After fifteen years, three as director of correspondence studies and 12 as director of alumni/church relations, Bill Gerig has decided it is time to move on and pursue a different avenue in life. In Bill's words, "The time has come for a personal change. Both Joyce and I feel that the Lord has released us from this assignment and it is time to move on."

Many pages could be penned listing Bill's accomplishments, successes and ministries over the last 12 years as director of alumni/church relations. His leadership has seen the alumni scholarship endowment fund grow to nearly $400,000. He has staged memorable alumni banquets, especially the last one when he was referring to the alumni choir and made the comment that "never has there been the occasion to have so many alumni gather and "sing!" (We're almost sure he meant "sing!") The list goes on with pastors' luncheons and golf tournaments and alumni gatherings along with the day to day tasks of running the office.

Bill was the alumni's anchor during the merger. He invested hundreds of hours explaining, reassuring and praying with alumni about the decision to merge. His gifts of listening, patience and peacemaking proved to be priceless during the transition. Bill recently shared with alumni, "I am so proud of you, the alumni and friends of Fort Wayne Bible College, Summit Christian College and now Taylor University, Fort Wayne. We have been able to see the 'big picture,' to see God's hand in the future of this very special college on Rudisill Boulevard."

One could go on about the accomplishments, but the greatest impact Bill has made is his exemplary life of godliness! Always a kind word, never too busy to lend a listening ear, solid biblical advice, words of wisdom and the laying of burdens and concerns at the throne of grace. Alumni events come and go, but the impact of Bill's godliness and graciousness is lasting to all who have worked and served with him.

Taylor University often refers to tradition when it reflects on its history...the same can be said of Bill. He has faithfully continued the rich Gerig heritage and the tradition of spiritual leadership and wise direction. So with great ease we fondly say a very difficult farewell to our dear friend. And we pray the prayer Bill has prayed for many of us..."May the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace as you trust in Him, so that you many overflow with hope by the power of His Holy Spirit." (Romans 15:13)
