commence

The path to our destination is not always a straight one. We go down the wrong road, we get lost, we turn back. Maybe it doesn’t matter which road we embark on. Maybe what matters is that we embark.

The Dining Commons. It’s perhaps one of the most populated and least appreciated places on campus. Whether you frequented the salad bar or deli, consumed cereal three times a day or created your own unique concoction for dinner each night, our college appetites would not have been quite as satisfied had it not been for our favorite Dining Commons memories.

“Because I’m a vegetarian I spent a lot of time at the salad bar. One evening while I was concocting a gourmet salad, Jason Hillier ’01 spoke to me for the first time ... two years later we were married.”

Kerry (Peifer) Hillier ’03, Mishawaka, Ind.
“Prior to the start of a meal all the students stood behind their chairs. A fellow was to seat a girl sitting next to him. At the start of school I could always tell the freshmen girls; they would not bend their knees enough, so I usually bumped them with the chair. It did not take long, however, for these girls to learn graceful sitting.”

J. Harvey Brown ’43, Hallston, Mass.

“I ate in the basement of the Magee-Campbell-Wisconsin Dormitory. I worked on a drinking glass cleaning machine, but then I found out you could make more money ($ .40) washing pots and pans, so I switched.”

David Scudder ’68, Bethel, Ohio

“I will always remember grilled peanut butter and jelly sandwiches. Since graduating from Taylor I have made them for friends, and they were a hit with them as well.”

Stephen Berwager ’76, Columbia, S.C.

“Of all the food served, Joe Biermann’s famous cheesecake was a favorite. We always hoped there were empty seats at our table so we could eat the extra pieces.”

Bonnie (Philpot) Kastelen ’64, Eldora, Iowa

“Unaccustomed to three full-course selections at my fingertips every day, I unwittingly gained the ‘freshman ten’ in short order and resorted to the salad bar to get myself back in shape before Olson ‘sun-deck’ season!”

Shirley (Hill) Gustafson ’79, Palas Heights, Ill.

“A favorite memory from the dining commons was the special Christmas dinner. As one approached the dining commons (a.k.a. space craft) it was so pretty with candlelight glowing through the windows, especially if there was snow on the ground. Inside were beautiful ice carvings and a scrumptious dinner with shrimp cocktail.”

Hettie (Hardin) Stauffer ’69, Fort Wayne, Ind.
On July 7, 2005, the cupola was placed in its permanent home on Ayres Alumni Memorial Hall, marking the completion of phase one of the renovation. In addition to being a nice architectural feature, it also provides necessary airflow through the attic. The 800-pound fixture is comprised of plastic, resin and aluminum supports and is a portion of the $1.7 million phase one renovation project.
A warm welcome ...

I can still recall the feeling of panic welling up inside me on the first day of every semester. There's no way I can complete all of that, I mused as I glanced over each syllabus.

By the end of the terms, though, I somehow finished the assigned tasks and still managed to catch up on my beauty sleep from time to time.

New beginnings can seem daunting, but they often bring the anticipation of grand things yet to come.

The following represents Taylor's new beginnings—from a new president and students on campus to alumni who are launching into new chapters in their lives. It is our hope that you will be encouraged by their bravery and inspired to instigate a novel commencement of your own.

As Taylor begins a new phase in its leadership, may you be confident that God has called the Habeckers back to Taylor for such a time as this. Join us as we wish them a warm welcome home.

This issue is dedicated to our alumni who invite fresh starts with a warm welcome, for all that the future may hold, despite the preliminary jitters that may come with new beginnings.

Blessings to you–

Trees become vibrant displays of color this time of year. Fallen crimson and amber leaves provide hours of raked fun for children. This same beautiful foliage also has the potential to disturb the equilibrium of rain gutters everywhere. Some people love these plummeted leaves; others do not. The same is true for our magazine. Let us know what you think; we'll rake in your opinions.
Film festival

I was wondering if there was a way to get a copy of the films presented at the 6th annual Film Festival? I would love to see the creativity and expertise of the current Taylor students!

Ashlyn Holz '90
St. Peter, Minn.

We would love to distribute the festival films to show off the hard work of our students, but unfortunately, we are unable to at this time. Many of the films include copyrighted music. We are currently investigating the legal issues involved with reproducing these materials; if we gain clearance to use them, we will most assuredly place them online and make them available to the public.

Soup-er houses

I was looking for information on The Soup House in the online magazine and found the article from 1999 by Sara Weinraub. The article was great because it explained exactly how The Soup House struck me when I went to a party there in 1996. That was my first time ever to hear of or try chai! I am at the University of Arkansas now and was recently told about The Arkansas House, which reminds me of The Soup House!

Thanks for the great reminder of our online magazine! Past issues and articles can be found at www.taylor.edu/upland/magazine/.

Flower power

Thank you for a wonderful Spring issue of Taylor. As I turned to page six I thought "what a wonderful photo of a dandelion—how nice." But I was taken back by the text. While growing and sprouting new ideas there was the concern about "... pesky weeds that need to be pulled."

As an "equal opportunity botanist" I have always viewed "weeds" differently than most. Are they not part of God’s creation as well? After all, so many of our garden plants have "weedy characteristics" that with proper cultivation can be put to good purpose.

One summer I decided to harvest all the dandelions in my garden, dry the roots, roast them, grind them and make a "dandelion coffee." The young, tender leaves can be eaten in a "dandelion salad" (as we do with its next of kin – Lactuca sativa, our garden lettuce, which had its origin as a "weed").

So, I encourage you, as your magazine grows and sprouts new ideas, I hope you will take a different approach to considering those things that appear to be "weeds" and see the value God has imparted to them.

I sincerely apologize for the "pesky weed" comment. I've always ignorantly labeled and dismissed these little yellow flowers as just that, but you're absolutely right. I never took into account their potential uses or diversity. Thank you for your insight—and for keeping us on our toes as we grow in wisdom about our fascinating world!

A booming impact

In the Spring 2005 issue, "After the rain" made me think of a night in the fall of 1950 when I stood in awe on the porch of the Magee-Campbell-Wisconsin Dormitory watching my first grand display of lightning and thunder. I had newly arrived at Taylor from California as a transfer. All the lightning and thunder I had seen in California was anemic compared with what held my attention that night.

Divine design

I just wanted you to know that your obvious effort in putting out a professionally designed and conceptual magazine is not going unnoticed. I am a graphic designer for an advertising agency in Fort Wayne, Ind. Designers are always trying to push ourselves to do design work that stands out. I can tell that you do the same. This magazine stands out. Keep up the good work. I look forward to the next issue.

Taylor is such a well-done publication—content rich and aesthetically pleasing. The production is simply first-rate, setting a very high bar for similar institutional publications. Congratulations on a terrific product and staff.

A summer of service

Most students look forward to summer for a time empty of schoolwork and full of relaxation. But this summer over 120 Taylor students spent their time off involved in church-related service around the world.

World Christian Fellowship (WCF) compiled the names of participating Taylor individuals into a Summer of Service prayer calendar that was distributed to the Taylor community “so that we can pray during the summer for as many students, faculty and staff as possible,” said Mary Rayburn, director of student ministries. “The prayer calendar only lists those who provided the information. We tried to keep their prayer date in line with the dates they are serving, if it’s not for the entire summer.”

WCF also sponsored a commissioning chapel on May 14, when several students shared testimonies of how God has used them in past summers.

Rayburn explained, “Our purpose for the chapel (and prayer calendar) is to challenge students, faculty and staff to be ‘salt and light’ wherever they may be this summer—working in an office or factory, being a camp counselor, serving internationally or taking classes.”
Responding to a national disaster

In light of the August 29 attack of Hurricane Katrina, Taylor has rallied to offer support. Despite the thousands who have been effected, Taylor has not been alerted to any fatalities involving alumni. Several have experienced property damage and in some cases have temporarily relocated to other areas.

The Taylor community is responding the best way it knows how—through prayer. A prayer service was held September 5, with over 100 students and staff attending. Additionally, an offering was collected during Chapel on September 9 and the week following, with the money sent to Christian relief organizations.

Individuals are also offering their services. Gary Cason, a Dining Commons worker, was called to active duty through the Indiana National Guard. A staff sergeant, he will assist with relief efforts for an estimated sixty to ninety days.

Brian Getz '06 was on a floor retreat when he heard that evacuees had been brought to a make-shift relief shelter at the Indiana State Fairgrounds. A balloon artist, the Christian education major volunteered his talents to entertain and encourage the refugees there.

Additionally, 15 of Dr. Cathy Harner's senior social work majors interviewed and assisted with medical processing for 48 storm refugees who were relocated to Marion, Ind. Relief trips to the devastated areas are planned for Fall Break.

Back to our roots

This spring Taylor was given a special glimpse into the life of its namesake, Bishop William Taylor, when several items were donated to the University by William E. Price III of Finksburg, Md. The great-great-grandnephew of the Bishop, Price donated a variety of belongings including several African artifacts and baskets, a large knife and a collection of letters written by the Bishop’s niece, Jenny Taylor.

The items were presumably sent to William Taylor’s brother, Andrew Taylor, Price’s great-great-grandfather, sometime during the 12 years Taylor served as Missionary Bishop of Africa.

Price donated the collection after inheriting it from his mother. “I decided it would be better to give it away so it could be viewed and studied instead of just sitting in my living room,” he said. Although Price has never been to Taylor, he thinks highly of the University and hopes to visit some day.

The compilation was on display in the Rediger Chapel/Auditorium for several months prior to its move to the University Archives in July.
Faculty accolades

Dr. JoAnn Rediger, associate professor of music, received the 2005 Teaching Excellence and Campus Leadership Award. She is best known as the dynamic and charismatic director of the Taylor Sounds and the Taylor University Chorale. Rediger excels in choral rehearsal technique and University public relations work. She has led Taylor choral groups on tours all around the world and is the founding director of the Children's Choir of Huntington County, Ind.

Dr. Paul Rothrock, professor of biology, received the 2005 Franklin W. and Joan M. Farman Distinguished Faculty Scholar Award. This award honors a faculty member who has publicly demonstrated significant expertise in original research, writing or other scholarly endeavors. Rothrock has published more than 25 articles in highly-regarded regional and national science journals and has authored several important papers dealing with the relationship between science and theology. He has shared his passion for God’s created world with Taylor students for more than 22 years.

Dr. Larry Helyer, professor of biblical studies, received the 2005 Taylor University Alumni Association Distinguished Professor Award. This award is presented to faculty members who display a positive influence on students, expertise in their field of specialization and visibility outside the college community. Helyer has written countless journal articles and several books, as well as participated in research and presented at numerous conferences and professional organizations. He has faithfully served Taylor with excellence for over 20 years.

Professor of philosophy Dr. Jim Spiegel’s book How to be Good in a World Gone Bad (Grand Rapids, Mich.: Kregel Publications, 2004) won an Award of Merit from Christianity Today under the category of “Spirituality.” The magazine honored 23 titles that “bring understanding to people, events and ideas that shape evangelical life, thought and mission.” With candor and clarity, Spiegel explores 22 different traits of a person with excellent character. This truly is a manual for how to be “blameless and pure … in a depraved generation” (Philippians 2:14).

Dr. Matt DeLong, associate professor of mathematics, was awarded the 2005 Henry L. Alder Award for Distinguished Teaching by a beginning college or university mathematics faculty member at the MathFest Prize Session on August 5 in Albuquerque, N.M. It is given to a professor whose teaching has been extraordinarily successful and whose effectiveness in teaching undergraduate mathematics is shown to have influence beyond his own classroom.
Spring sports review

Golf: The team ended its season with a seventh place finish at the NAIA Region VIII Championships. Matt Hall ’07 earned All-Region honors.

Baseball: The men’s baseball team finished the season with a 23-24, 12-11 record, placing them fourth in the South division of the Mid-Central Conference (MCC). Trent Mast ’06 and Chris Nycz ’07 were selected to the MCC All-Conference team. Mast was also honored as a member of the NAIA Region VIII All-Region team.

Softball: The Lady Trojan softball team ended the season with a record of 10-21, 7-9 in the MCC, placing them fifth in the league standings. Emily Pensinger ’06 was honored as a member of the All-MCC team.

Women’s track: The women’s track and field squad placed third at the MCC Championships. Three Lady Trojans earned All-Conference honors. The team also qualified two individuals for the NAIA National Championships. Carolyn Betteridge ’06 broke her own school record in the 3,000-meter steeplechase with a time of 12:06.74.

Men’s track: The men’s track and field team won their eleventh consecutive MCC Championship. Eight members of the team won All-Conference honors, while Head Coach Ted Bowers won Coach of the Year accolades. The Trojans concluded their season at the NAIA National Championships in Louisville, Ky. Bryan Jackson ’06 earned his seventh NAIA All-American honor with a fifth-place effort in the 400-meter hurdles.

Men’s tennis: The team competed in the NAIA Regional Championships and finished sixth.

Men’s basketball: Head Coach Paul Patterson was selected as a court coach for the USA Basketball Under-21 National Team Trials held in Dallas, Texas, in July. Patterson was responsible for conducting drills, coaching scrimmages and working with players vying for spots on the 2005 USA U21 World Championship Team.
It is indeed a humbling experience to be asked by one’s alma mater to serve as president and first lady. We have felt God’s calling very clearly in returning to this place. We do so with incredible joy and expectations about all that God is going to do.

We have a wonderful challenge and opportunity that we need to fully leverage together. Let me emphasize that word together—two people cannot do this, five people cannot do it, but many people connected with arms linked together can do great things.

“For the eyes of the Lord range throughout the earth to strengthen those whose hearts are fully committed to Him” (2 Chronicles 16:9).” This is a challenge to have the kind of people that God can fully use and wants to use, whether that be at the student level, the staff level, the faculty level or the board level. We want to be those kind of people here at Taylor University so that we can work together to accomplish His work.

“Oh the Lord builds the house, its builders labor in vain (Psalm 127:1).” Even now as we anticipate the wonderful things I know in my heart that God is going to do with all of us working together, unless the Lord builds it, we labor in vain.

Let us not labor in vain. Let’s toil together building the house that He has planned and in doing so become all God wants us to become—globally, regionally, nationally and internationally. Let’s keep the main thing the main thing as we go onward—helping learners connect with God’s love for the world.

Marylou and I are excited about this place, and we look forward to all that God has for us to accomplish—together. God will do exceedingly above and beyond what we can ever dare ask for or imagine. Let’s pray and trust Him to do just that. Even now, before it even happens, let’s promise to give Him the glory and praise for all He will do in the days ahead.

In closing, “May the God himself, the God of peace, sanctify you through and through. May your whole spirit, soul and body be kept blameless at the coming of our Lord Jesus. The One who calls you is faithful and He will do it (II Thessalonians 5:23).” And so He will. Amen.
Communication and technology

While talking with friends, you hear about a new technology that someone finds wonderful. As you listen, you begin to think about how such technology could save time and money in your life. But is it really worth the hassle?

Technopoly?

Neil Postman, late chair of the department of culture and communication at New York University in his book Technopoly: The Surrender of Culture to Technology wrote that whenever we hear about new technology, the hype associated with it usually relates to how it can (or will) make our lives smoother, easier, faster, better. But, he asked, while it giveth, does it ever taketh away?

Postman contended that technology is “a Faustian bargain.” Too often people incorporate it into their lives without considering the long-term implications. In America, technology has covertly downplayed religion’s role by promising answers to questions and problems previously handled by religion. If science doesn’t have an answer now, most likely it will in the near future. Subsequently, there’s not much need for priests or prayers, just place your faith in science.

That’s not normal!

Another byproduct of technological proliferation of particular interest is its impact on word meanings. If you were to go to a house in one of our cities or suburbs that had no phone of any kind, it would not be far-fetched to consider such an abode as “abnormal,” would it? But why? It is strange. In fact, it wouldn’t be going too far to call it unnatural. Think about that gradual change. What is normative is now confused with what is natural. The meaning of a word is blurred.

Consider the word communication. While speaking at Calvin College in recent years, Postman related that he was asked to “converse” with a professor from Massachusetts Institute of Technology on the impact of technology on society. When he was informed that the idea was to have their conversation via e-mail, Postman balked. Aware of technology’s tendency to impact meanings, he replied that such interaction was not a conversation. He agreed to participate only if the word conversation was replaced by the phrase “interacting via e-mail.” Calling e-mail interaction conversation was blurring lines he wanted to remain distinct.

What does it all mean?

Undoubtedly, technology is impacting communication. Consider the latter word. Deriving from Latin words “bound” (munis) and “together” (com), the word communication has an interesting etymology. In one historical sample from the Oxford English Dictionary it was synonymous with sexual intercourse, in another it referred to individuals partaking of holy communion (as communicants). It seems to have roots implying more than can be gleaned from today’s text messaging.

At Taylor, the concept of “intentional community” (with the same Latin roots as above) is a vital part of our culture. Does that concept include the idea of “virtual” community, something that is artificially created in cyberspace? How could the term community be impacted by its association with the modifiers “intentional” and “virtual”? Os Guinness, in The Call: Finding and Fulfilling the Central Purpose of Your Life, has an answer:

“... no amount of talk of ‘virtual community’ can overlook the fact that communication that is person-to-person but not face-to-face amounts to a severe loss. The plain fact is that for most modern people, community is either a rare experience or a distant, even mocking, ideal.”

It’s something you might ponder the next time you partake of the body and blood of our Lord as a “communicant” or think about using the word communication for dropping an electronic message to a friend over the Internet.

Dr. Dale Keller is an associate professor of communication arts.
In the hallway of life, doors of opportunity are everywhere, providing thresholds to endless possibilities. Sometimes these doors are slammed shut. Other times, one will open unexpectedly, offering an inviting entry.

These doors determine direction. Each one penetrated unlocks a world of new encounters. What threshold will you traverse next?
“Ask and it will be given to you; seek and you will find; knock and the door will be opened to you. For everyone who asks receives; he who seeks finds; and to him who knocks, the door will be opened.”

Matthew 7:7
Doors of opportunity

President Eugene Habecker’s plan to help Taylor achieve its full potential

Gene Habecker ’68 has come a long way from the one-room schoolhouse in Hershey, Pa., where he began his formal education. It was an experience he describes as “one of the most enriching educational experiences of my life” because he was able to hear his school lessons, as well as those for grades above him. The experience ignited a spark within him for education, one that has been fanned into a full-fledged fire over the years.

Gene came to Taylor in 1964, sight unseen. He heard of Taylor through a family friend, and though he was unsure if he was college material, he applied anyway. Fortunately for Gene he was accepted, since Taylor was the only school to which he applied. “I didn’t even know what a Christian liberal arts college was,” he said. “But I had a clear sense that this is where God wanted me.”

His time at Taylor was “unbelievable” and “where God got ahold of (his) life.” A political science major, Gene did not have his sights set on any particular career; rather, he looked to the Lord for guidance. “I had no idea what He was going to do with me,” he said. “But it was the quality of preparation I received at Taylor that allowed me to embrace opportunities when God opened the doors.”

God certainly has opened doors, and Gene has been faithful to walk through. After Taylor, he earned degrees from Ball State University, University of Michigan and Temple University School of Law.
He truly has a heart for servant leadership, a subject he has devoted to three books. Gene hopes to model these principles during his time at Taylor: “It’s using power and authority and influence in their right ways and for the right reasons that marks the difference being a leader who follows the heartbeat of the Lord.”

Only a few years ago, Gene began to feel that heartbeat—the nudgings of the Holy Spirit—urging him to invest his life in the next generation. He pursued some adjunct faculty work on the side, but it wasn’t until the Taylor presidency opened that he and Marylou felt that they could directly “pour our lives into students, sharing with them what we’re learning, the good and the bad.”

And that’s exactly what they plan to do regularly, weekly if possible. They will host a weekly one-hour session for student leaders (and anyone else who would like to attend). For the first 15-20 minutes, Gene and Marylou will share what they feel God is teaching them and what it means to be a follower of Christ. The remainder of the time will be open for discussion and questions about anything from the University to the Bible and beyond.

They also hope to encourage students’ attendance by making the President’s home more accessible. They already had a sidewalk installed near the Kesler Student Activities Center directly to their back door, “so students will be able to come to our house without having to endanger themselves by navigating Reade Avenue.”
They hope to initiate an active “welcome” with students, desiring for the home to be a beehive of activity. “This home is an asset to the University and will be fully deployed to help it achieve its mission,” he said. “We’ll be disappointed if we don’t have thousands of people involved with this home each year.”

One way they hope to increase activity is with a fire pit that was installed behind their home. But the Habeckers realize that their time here won’t just be a time of socializing.

Returning to Taylor “is a very humbling thing because it is a huge opportunity,” he said. He also recognizes the great responsibility that comes along with it. “To whom God has entrusted much, much is required.”

Indeed it is. Gene and Marylou are planning for just that. “Our goal is to have Taylor achieve its full potential.”

Regardless of what the future holds for Taylor, Gene plans to let God direct his steps. “I let Him lead, and I follow. When He zigs, I’m going to zig; when He zags, I’m going to zag,” he said. It’s that faithful obedience that has brought him all the way from a one-room schoolhouse in Pennsylvania to President of Taylor University in Indiana.

A portrait of his one-room schoolhouse now hangs in Gene’s study. It serves as a reminder of his humble educational beginning—and indeed how far God has led by opening doors of opportunity.
Home is where the heart is

Marylou Habecker’s hospitality is apparent to all who enter

Maintenance men were busy planting flowers, moving shrubs and generally sprucing up the area as I walked the sidewalk to my destination—the President’s home.

The door swung open to reveal a friendly face, First Lady Marylou (Napolitano ’68) Habecker. She graciously welcomed me into the 39-year-old home. Her gentle spirit was immediately evident and matched by her soft-spoken nature.

The smell of fresh paint flooded my nostrils as I stepped over the threshold. She quickly introduced me to the housekeepers who were polishing the foyer.

We proceeded through a maze of boxes to the kitchen. The counter was covered with gifts welcoming them to Upland, Ind. “Everyone has been so gracious,” she said as she searched the cupboards for drinking glasses. She explained how people in the community had already left everything from chocolate chip cookies to fresh tomatoes on their doorstep.

With our glasses full, we made our way to the living room and settled in for an interview next to the baby grand piano. The room was cluttered with furniture and boxes waiting to be opened. Bare walls screamed for décor; empty shelves invited adornment. The Habeckers arrived in Upland only one day earlier and planned to leave in a few days for a ten-day trip to South Africa.

South Africa is just one of many countries the Habeckers have visited, serving others and developing their passion for global engagement. Their involvement with the American Bible Society for 14 years sent them, literally, around the world.

Perhaps most memorable for Marylou are visiting Jerusalem and the Seven Wonders of the World. But it was Garbage Village in Cairo, Egypt, that tugged at her heart.

Garbage Village, whose name reflects its smell, is a recycling center where the poorest of the poor gather trash, sort it and sell it in an attempt to make a living. A destitute man was walking through the town when he heard Scripture being recited from a tape recording. He went back night after night to hear about Jesus. Although he lived in the middle of a garbage heap and had missing teeth, he still proclaimed, “Now when I have trouble I have hope because Jesus is in my heart.”

Marylou offered her perspective, “You can take the slickest looking guy in New York City that’s so put together and perfect, but Jesus looks at the inside of our hearts, not what’s on the outside. The man in Garbage Village had the cleanest, purest heart—because, as Isaiah 1:18 says, ‘... though your sins are like scarlet, they shall be white as snow; though they are red as crimson, they will be like wool.’” Her hazel eyes filled with tears as she recalled the touching moment.

Only a few seconds later, they lit up as in walked her husband Gene Habecker ’68 (who she describes as “incredibly Godly, passionate and the most biblically-centered person I know”).

“Hi, Sweetie,” he said as he came over and gently kissed her cheek. Gene and Marylou’s romance began as students at Taylor in the Dining Commons, which was then located in the Union (which Marylou affectionately referred to as “the spaceship”). It wasn’t until their junior year that they “became more than special friends.” They were married the summer after they graduated and this past July celebrated their 37th wedding anniversary.
“I couldn’t believe what I experienced at Taylor ...”

A first generation college student from Michigan, Marylou came to Taylor and, admittedly, “had no idea what a credit hour was!” She graduated with an elementary education major four years later—and a better understanding of the Christian community she now so loves. “I couldn’t believe what I experienced at Taylor, primarily the people, secondarily the education.”

The former East Hall (now Grace Olson Hall) resident hasn’t been disconnected from her alma mater. Since 2004, she served as a Taylor Board member, a position she held until Gene accepted the presidency. Not surprisingly, Marylou and Gene share a passion for Christian higher education. “Our hearts have always been in (it),” she said.

But Marylou’s focus is on cultivating relationships. She hopes to be involved in the community and in the lives of students, faculty and staff—ultimately reaching people where their needs are and walking alongside them. “We feel like God has brought us back and that many lives will be changed, ours included,” she said.

And so Gene and Marylou return to Taylor to do Christ’s work with joy in their hearts and wide smiles on their faces. “It feels like we never left (Taylor) but have a whole lot more experience and the war scars of life,” she said.

With a big grin, she bid me farewell. As she did, the sunlight from the front door reflected off the delicate blue hearts on her necklace, causing them to sparkle.

As I left their dwelling, maintenance men were still toiling away in the noonday heat. Although they still had some cosmetic improvements to make, if home is where the heart is, this is already home.
Taking flight
One alumnus’ journey to becoming president of Youth for Christ

When Dan Wolgemuth ’77 boarded an airplane in Washington, D.C., to return home to Kansas City, Mo., little did he know God was going to take him on a spiritual flight.

A member of the national board of Youth for Christ (YFC), he had recently been nominated as a potential candidate to succeed YFC/USA President Roger Cross. Dan was reluctant to even consider it as an option. “Not in my wildest dreams did it seem like a possibility,” he said.

Dan compiled a list of reasons as to why it would be illogical for him to accept the position. But his hesitance “had nothing to do with my passion or what I believed God had gifted me with or what I loved to do; it had everything to do with economics and convenience.”

With these thoughts flying, he headed home from his business trip. Soaring 30,000 feet above the earth, God began tugging at his heart. "It was as if He was saying, ‘I’m not calling you at this point to be president of YFC. I’m calling you to say ‘yes’ to me.’” Admittedly, “it was a tough airplane ride.” He disembarked the plane with a “different heart” and a willing spirit, one that said ‘yes’ to God.

YFC hired a national recruiting firm to scour the country in search of interested candidates, which comforted Dan. Though he was now willing, he was confident they would find someone more qualified.

But they found no one more well-equipped. After months of interviews, Dan was offered the job, a moment flooded with emotion. “It was like in the airplane, like a spiritual renewal. I realized there is little else that matters in life than what I do for Him.”

He accepted the position and officially began April 1, 2005. But YFC is nothing new to the Wolgemuth family. Dan’s father, Sam, was president of the organization from 1965-1973. Despite his father’s legacy, Dan has never felt like he had to somehow measure up. “I feel like I stand on my father’s shoulders,” he said.

Ironically, Dan’s first memories of YFC are of picking up his father at the airport. “I’ve always known YFC, but I never had a clue I’d ever be this involved. But I knew that whatever I did, God wanted me to be His.”

And His he is, which is why Dan dedicates every Monday morning at 9:00 a.m. (Denver time) to 15 minutes of prayer with 180 of his YFC executive directors around the nation. He sends a responsive reading ahead of time through e-mail, then they dial into a conference call and “hear a staccato prayer from all across the country.”

Of the nine presidents of YFC, Dan joins three other Taylor graduates—Ted Engstrom ’38, Jay Kesler ’58 and Sam Wolgemuth ’38. He attributes the deep connection between YFC and Taylor to similar missions. “Taylor’s vision for young people matches beautifully what YFC is about, so it becomes a logical training bed for the ministry.”

It was during his time at Taylor that Dan developed deep relationships, beginning with his wife Mary (Cargo ’78), who he describes as “the highlight of what I got in college.”

Dan and Mary’s children have also come to Taylor—Andrew ’03 and wife Chrissy (Jones) ’03, Erik ’05 and Alli ’08. “It makes me really grateful to take my kids [to Taylor] because it’s a great place. With three kids there, we’ve sent a lot of money to Taylor, but we believe it has been a great investment.”

Worthwhile, too, has been his investment in YFC that impacts eternity. Last year alone, nearly 200,000 youth all around the world came to know Christ through YFC ministries. “To be able to lead an organization that does this is really incredible.”

Although Dan never had YFC planned for his future, God did. And so their journey together on this new adventure is taking flight.
A step of faith
How God led a 2005 grad to Taylor, and her next steps

Imagine a life that isn’t cluttered with regrets. Imagine a faith not fractured by disillusionment, human reason and compromise. Then, imagine a joy that defies human comprehension.

This is Christine Amony ’05.

Since she came to the U.S. in 2001, her life has been anything but easy. Then again, hardships were nothing new for Amony, who with her family fled their home in Northern Uganda to escape a life of slavery imposed by Sudanese raiders. As one of 12 children from an impoverished family, Amony wasn’t technically penniless when she came to the U.S. Her family had scraped together all of $20 to use for, what she called, “any bits along the way.”

And actually, the way Amony originally planned did not go through Upland, Ind., or include Taylor University. She had accepted an athletic scholarship to play collegiate volleyball in California (a sport she had only taken up late in high school). Although she had never heard of the school (a well-recognized Christian college), she boarded the plane in faith that she could play for the team and that the seemingly insurmountable financial challenge she faced would be taken care of by God.

That belief was tested when the coach who recruited her accepted a job at another school after her freshman year. The new coach reduced Amony’s scholarship in a dollar-stretching strategy aimed at attracting more players, and it seemed as if her dream of an American college education would vanish. “I fasted, cried and prayed every night to God,” Amony said. “When I talked to my Mum during that time, she said, ‘My daughter, don’t cry. God has a perfect plan for you.’” Her mother’s assurance came true when she received a financial aid offer from Taylor’s volleyball coach, Angie Fincannon, whom she had met at a tournament the previous year.

Although Amony had achieved MVP status on the Ugandan National volleyball team and shown flashes of promise that sophomore season, it would take nearly a year before she began to be the consistent contributor Fincannon envisioned. But that was on the playing floor. Off the court, Amony’s simple faith and joyful attitude had an impact on coach and team alike.

“Faith was the big thing with Christine. She came to Taylor on faith,” said Fincannon. “She had faith that it was going to work out at Taylor. She had faith that she was going to get better (as a player) ... That was something that really touched me.”

As Amony’s first season in Upland was winding down she received shattering news that her sister had died following a sudden illness. “She was in such shock,” Fincannon related. “I walked in, and she just collapsed ... it broke my heart. She sobbed so helplessly. I could feel every mile of the distance between her and her family. I sat with her, rubbed her head and let her cry.”

Within minutes, as it seemed to Fincannon, Amony’s teammates learned what had happened and began arriving at the Odle Gymnasium to comfort and love her as best they could. “They just wrapped themselves around her,” said Fincannon. “They cried with her. It felt like a family member of ours had died. I just couldn’t imagine losing a sister and not being able to go home to the family and grieve.”

In Uganda, people are buried quickly following their death, which made it impossible for Amony to attend her sister’s funeral even if she had had the funds for an airline ticket. So she observed her sister’s passing the only way she could when, amid Fincannon’s protests, she joined the team for a scheduled game in Indianapolis, Ind., the next day. “She said, ‘I want to play, and I want to play for my sister,’” Fincannon related. “I just prayed that God would give her the strength to play. He did. She played phenomenally.”
The team was so touched by Amony’s resolve and testimony that they pooled their resources to purchase a plane ticket home for her that Christmas.

“I was overwhelmed by the love, kindness, prayers and notes I received from the students, staff and faculty,” Amony said. “The Taylor family indeed embraced me in God’s love during my time of grieving. This challenged me to move beyond my grief and press on toward the goal of the prize that has been set before us.”

Although Amony would also lose a brother a year-and-a-half later, it was her faith that drew and challenged her teammates and friends in their own Christian walks.

“There are many things that I will remember about our ‘Ugandan Sister,’ mainly her smile, contagious laugh and her faith in the Lord,” said teammate Lindsay Diehm ’05. “I have seen her faithfulness and devotion to the Lord, and it has encouraged me to continually grow in my walk with Him. No matter how difficult things were, Christine was able to stay positive and focused. She overcame a lot of obstacles to excel in the classroom and on the court.”

“I just saw a joyful, joyful Christian,” related Barb Davenport, the person whom Amony calls her “American Mum” and “God’s angel.” Davenport worked with Amony and other athletes to ensure they did not fall behind in their studies. “The Lord really was her Shepherd. She believed He would take care of her.” And He has, partially by providing her the Taylor volleyball team—and the camaraderie that follows.

“We are always a family when we are together. To us a family means being honest, caring, loving, supporting and encouraging each other,” Amony said. “We are also willing to do whatever it takes as a team to win for Jesus’ glory. Just like what our slogan says, ‘For Him we play to win,’ I have enjoyed praying with my teammates before and after games and playing in an environment where everything is for God ... I am so thankful that God brought me to Taylor University.”

Lilly Endowment, Inc. announces $4.5 million grant!

“Taylor University is once again particularly blessed to be the recipient of the generosity of the Lilly Endowment, Inc. Alumni and friends have a wonderful opportunity to prepare and equip our students to meet 21st century challenges through a rigorous academic curriculum that enhances all our programs to ensure the essential Taylor experience. Each dollar you invest in the University will be matched by the Endowment with $1.50! I am so excited that God has given me the privilege of leading Taylor during these great days of global opportunity. Will you join me by giving and then celebrating with me God’s faithfulness as we partner together in achieving this goal?”

Eugene B. Hobbs

In a June announcement from the Lilly Endowment, Inc., Taylor was invited to participate in The Special Initiative to Strengthen Philanthropy for Indiana Higher Education Institutions-Phase II. Beginning June 1, 2005, all gifts from alumni and friends count toward a $3,000,000 goal that will be matched by the Endowment at a 1:1.5 ratio.

By the conclusion of this special initiative, Dec. 31, 2006, Taylor will receive $4.5 million from the Lilly Endowment, Inc.
The President of Taylor University functions as the chief executive officer of the institution, accounting for the overall leadership and management. Since 2000, this position was filled by David Gyertson. However, returning to his “original calling” to “equip emerging world leaders for the Christian faith,” he now serves as distinguished professor of leadership formation and renewal at the School of Leadership Studies at Regent University.

Subsequently, God called Eugene Habecker to return to his alma mater to fill the presidential vacancy. And he does so with passion and enthusiasm. “We anticipate a wonderful and exciting ministry at Taylor, and we have incredible expectations for what God is going to do as He leads us together to embrace dreams greater than memories,” he said.

Gyertson and Habecker worked together to ensure a smooth time of transition. The following report represents the 2004-05 fiscal year, under the direction of Gyertson. We look forward to all God has in the future under Habecker’s leadership.
BETWEEN THE LINES

The following pages represent a brief overview of the past year, but it is not the whole story. These facts and figures say much about Taylor’s successes, but they don’t adequately reflect the whole-person education, the spiritual growth or the changed lives that happen each year. That’s what it’s all about.
Progress Toward Achieving 2004-05
Strategic Priorities

- Development of New Site and Facility Master Plans for the Upland and Fort Wayne Campuses
  At the January Board meeting the Troyer Group presented an overview of the proposed Upland master plan. The Fort Wayne master plan is in the final stage of development.

- Life Together Covenant Review
  The University Council for Assessment and Planning (UCAP) held forums requested by the Board LTC Task Force with key University stakeholders for the purpose of soliciting comments and suggestions about the current version of the LTC.

- Implementation of the Academic Quality Improvement Program (AQIP)
  In January 2004 the Higher Learning Commission of the North Central Association approved Taylor’s AQIP application. Action projects for the next three years have been developed.

- Enrollment Management
  Refining current enrollment management practices as well as developing improved monitoring, forecasting and reporting plans have reached new levels of attention and sophistication over the past year. New financial aid packaging standards designed to target specific student profiles have been implemented. Most noteworthy is the strong ongoing academic affairs/student affairs collaboration efforts that have resulted in raising freshman retention three percent in 2004, streamlining class scheduling procedures and developing a freshman Irish Studies Program that achieves program enrichment goals as well as meets enrollment targets on the Upland campus.

Information Technology

- The Luminis Portal, myTAYLOR, was implemented in Fall 2004.
- The wireless network was expanded on both campuses.

Institutional Research

- Stephen Dayton was hired in September 2004 as the key staff member responsible for institutional reporting, analyzing data and preparing ad hoc reports needed for “data- enriched decision making.” The Institutional Fact Book was expanded this year and now includes program assessment reports. The Alumni Survey for the class of 2001 was completed. Analysis is underway.

Other

- The Upland vice president for academic affairs search process was suspended when President Gyertson announced plans to accept a faculty appointment at Regent University in 2005.
- The new academic governance model is working well and being refined as issues arise.
- A faculty salary study subcommittee of the Faculty Personnel Committee is developing guiding principles and compensation recommendations.
- CTE & CR&I—both the Center for Teaching Excellence and Center for Research and Innovation programs are unfolding according to proposed timelines.
Upland Campus

At the heart of Taylor University’s academic life is a committed faculty. Eleven new members joined the ranks for the 2004-05 year. Four faculty members were recognized for their long-term service as they retired: Dr. Eleanor Barrick, modern languages; Robert Benjamin, accounting; Dr. Timothy Diller, computer science; and Janet Loy, modern languages.

The 40th Annual Science Seminar focused on the scientific study of origins. The goal was to expose students to the broad range of views held by speakers who have a Christian orientation.

Taylor students competed well this year in the Ethics Bowl, the Michigan Annual Take Home Competition in Mathematics, and a national science competition in Texas where the nanosatellite team competed.

One hundred thirty-five students studied at 21 different off-campus sites during 2004-05.

New media majors were introduced in the art, communication arts and the computer science departments. These interdisciplinary majors are designed to reflect the convergence of communication, technology and design in broadcast, web and print media.

TABS (Taylor Association of Business Students) planned a successful day-long conference in February attended by over 300 students. Sixteen presenters, many Taylor alumni, gave students a view of what to expect in the workplace.

Interterm is here to stay! After a thorough study, the faculty voted to retain a 4-1-4 calendar to allow for off-campus travel and intensive focus on one subject, thus enhancing student performance.

Several opportunities for collaboration in research projects between faculty and students emerged this year. The Center for Research and Innovation received a Lilly Endowment “intellectual capital grant,” part of which was to bolster research.

Fort Wayne Campus

Academic Affairs on the Fort Wayne campus became a more autonomous unit within the University. A separate Academic Policy and Curriculum Committee was formed to review issues that only pertain to the Fort Wayne campus. Two campus associate deans were installed to assist in administrative duties. Campus academic departments were formed that relate more closely to the campus context.

The campus’ distinctive of spiritual formation was enhanced dramatically. Many full-time faculty assigned “soul projects” enabling students to meditate extensively on scriptures relevant to course topics.

Distinguished visiting practitioners and strategic partnerships advanced the applied majors offered on campus.

A newly forged partnership between Prison Fellowship and the Justice Studies Department trained criminal justice majors to mentor children with incarcerated parents.

An internal partnership between the Center for Lifelong Learning and several academic departments on campus created a path for an associate’s degree online and the completion of a bachelor’s degree on campus. This program, known as 2+2, is targeting to students from a home-schooled background.
Upland Campus

Development

- The Taylor Fund continued to increase again this year with a total of $1,531,273, a 17 percent increase over the previous year.

- Taylor University's extended phonathon for the Taylor Fund marked a 65 percent increase over last year's total. Total pledged for fiscal 2004-05 is $407,402 from 3,456 pledges.

- Alumni participation continues to grow with 46 percent of alumni solicited giving to the University. The national average for private liberal arts colleges is 9.4 percent.

University Relations and Marketing

- With refined marketing and branding programs in place, publications have moved to a level of improved excellence, including three issues of the award-winning Taylor magazine annually.

- Presidential transition plans dominated the second half of the year, with emphasis on communication via print and Web.

- The Kesler Student Activities Center dedication took place during Homecoming 2004. Plans for major Web site revisions are in place, and new portals have been launched.

Alumni Relations

- The office of Alumni Relations is building relationships with students, alumni and friends. Regional chapters have been established in Indianapolis, Grand Rapids, Washington D.C., Chicago and Orlando. Online resources such as the Taylor Web site, monthly eNews and the soon-to-be-launched alumni portal and online directory make communication with alumni more effective and efficient.

William Taylor Foundation

- The Foundation accounted for over $3,790,000 in bequests, as well as capital, current and deferred gifts. Individuals were encouraged to make sure they have all of their proper documents in order, including wills, living trusts (if needed), power of attorney, health care representatives and living wills.
University Advancement

Fort Wayne Campus

Development

- The Council of 100 recognition program was launched in October 2004 with 44 members inducted. The Wall of Honor, located in the Eicher Student Commons, was also installed.

- The Fort Wayne Fund exceeded its $545,000 goal with the help of phonathon pledges exceeding $82,000 and 37 percent alumni participation. The two-week phonathon experienced a 16 percent increase from last fiscal year.

- Over $75,000 was raised through direct mail, a 30 percent increase over the previous year, with each dollar costing only $.10 to raise.

- The establishment of the Peter L. Eicher Giving Society was announced. Members of the giving society are faculty and staff donors. Employee giving for the 2004-05 fiscal year was 83 percent.

University Relations

- The new Web site for the Fort Wayne campus was launched in October 2004.

- University Relations collaborated with Admissions to implement new marketing concepts, which resulted in enhanced publications, promotional materials, television commercials and radio spots. The new tagline “Where your calling takes shape” has been well-received.

- The first edition of Profiles in Servant Leadership was published, and University Relations played a key role promoting the Lilly Guest Lecture Series.

Alumni Relations

- The Alumni Directory was completed and distributed.

- Homecoming/Parents Weekend was a huge success raising over $6,000 for the Student Emergency Fund with over 150 alumni attending.

- A state-of-the-art power point presentation was developed to share information with alumni, friends, students and parents.

Upland Campus

Taylor World Outreach sponsored eight trips over spring break to the Virgin Islands, Russia, Ecuador, Dominican Republic, the Bahamas, Mexico, Daytona Beach and Homestead, Fla. Over 150 students, faculty and staff were involved.

Residence Life Programs presented their annual “Sex in the Village” series focusing on issues of sexual abuse, including how to help survivors of sexual abuse and the effects of pornography.

The Leadership Initiative of Taylor programs had approximately 450 attend their monthly leadership training seminars.

The Campus Ministries Office raised over $14,000 to assist Tsunami relief efforts.

The Career Development Office (CDO) Task Force recommended the relocation of the CDO to the Student Union to take advantage of higher levels of student traffic. Two new staff persons have also been added.

Men’s and Women’s Conferences had approximately 300 and 500 participants respectively.

The Multicultural Task Force is in the process of developing recommendations for improving the experience of current American ethnic students.

Admissions

This past fall, Taylor University welcomed 477 freshmen to the Upland campus. Admissions hosted over 1700 visitors and conducted over 1600 interviews. This freshman class, the largest in the past three years, came to Upland from 34 states and 10 countries. Over 70 percent are from out of state; they averaged a 3.6 GPA in high school, where 37 percent of them graduated in the top ten percent of their class. They averaged 1182 on the SAT and 26.3 on the ACT. Over 27 percent are either the child of an alumnus or the sibling of a current student.

Athletics

The 2004-05 athletic season was highlighted by six Trojan teams earning the right to compete at the NAIA National Championship level.

- Five NAIA All-Americans
- Eleven NAIA Scholar-Athletes
- Thirty-two MCC All-Conference Athletes
- Eight Mid-States Football Association All-Conference Athletes
- Three MCC Coach of the Year awards
- Three MCC Regular Season Champions
- One MCC Tournament Champion
Fort Wayne Campus
Taylor University Fort Wayne student development, dedicated to “whole person” maturity, made the theme, “Lead a life worthy of the calling,” its heartbeat. A campus committed to intentional spiritual formation, chapel programs and campus discipleship played key roles. Ninety-seven students participated in Taylor World Outreach short-term mission experiences, including four trips to Jamaica, with a special hurricane relief trip after Hurricane Ivan, and two to Ecuador. On campus, Discipleship Coordinators planned topical Bible studies, available to students and staff, in small group settings throughout the academic year.

The Lilian Rolf Home and the Clyde Taylor House held upperclass females majoring in elementary education and upperclass males majoring in computer science, respectively. Hausser Hall served as the first-year student residence with men on the first floor and women on the second. The new configuration provided opportunities for developing friendships and programming to be geared specifically toward new students.

The Taylor Student Organization had a productive year as they worked to expand library and fitness center hours. In addition, new aerobic equipment was purchased with TSO funding, and the senior class donated benches placed under the flagpole in the Witmer Circle.

Admissions
Intentional branding efforts were launched in the 2004-05 recruitment year to develop a market niche for students seeking curricular and co-curricular programs emphasizing applied learning and spiritual formation in the Christian higher education context. These efforts helped to shape a freshman class that is less regional, more diverse and more confident in their vocational calling.

Athletics
The 2004-05 athletic season was highlighted by the Lady Falcon volleyball finishing second in the 2004 U.S. Collegiate Athletic Association National Tournament, and the ladies’ basketball team placed fifth in the USCAA National Tournament.

- Four All-Americans
- Two All-American Honorable Mentions
- Six Academic All-Americans
- One Second-Team All-American
- Two All-Tournament Teams
- Two National Tournaments
- Six Players of the Week Awarded
- One Tournament MVP
- Two First-Team National All-American
- One National All-American Honorable Mention
- Two broken school records
iOE

Beginning its sixth year, the Institute for Organizational Effectiveness (iOE) continues to partner with nonprofit organizations and their leadership teams to pursue performance excellence. Twenty-four CEOs, primarily serving the larger social service agencies in Allen County, have completed their iOE experience as members of the first two cohorts. Their program has included special workshops, organizational assessments, tailored projects and coaching. We plan to continue to build on the goodwill generated in the iOE cohorts over the past five years.

WBCL

The 30th anniversary of WBCL approaches, and the ministry continues to expand, at home and abroad.

With the installation of a translator at 97.7 fm, WBCL’s coverage now blankets Adrian, Mich., thanks to the generous donors who covered the cost of the entire project.

While many radio stations discontinued Internet streaming due to increasing royalty fees, the value of around-the-world ministry outweighed the cost. During this past year, over thirty countries have been reached worldwide.

Listeners provided 24,800 clothing items during the April Romanian Likewise Project.
One of my personal core values is the belief that Christianity is a team sport—that God’s work is done best when capable, committed individuals serve together as the body of Christ. All that has been achieved during these past five years is the harvest of a team of dedicated servant-leaders determined to see God’s Kingdom and Christ’s glory first. I am thankful for the exceptional people God brought alongside me. It has been an honor to be yoked with each of them in such important and productive work.

May the love of God, the peace of Christ and the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit be with you in this Great Commission mission. And may He continue to provide the resources, vision and courage to both communicate and demonstrate the redemptive love of Jesus Christ to a world in need through tough minds, tender hearts and hands outstretched in competent, compassionate service.

Taylor fares well in survey
Taylor has received a third-place ranking in the Midwest region of Comprehensive Colleges-Bachelors in the newest U.S. News and World Report survey, America's Best Colleges. The ranking marks Taylor's eighth straight top-three finish and the seventeenth time for the Upland campus to receive a high placement in the survey.

St. Mary's College (Ind.) and Calvin College (Mich.) finished first and second while St. Norbert College (Wis.) was fourth, and Ohio Northern University (Ohio) finished fifth.

"These results reflect on the continued commitment to excellence and the good efforts of the entire Taylor community. Praise the Lord for His continued faithfulness," said President Eugene Habecker.

Among criteria determining the ranking, Taylor's average graduation rate of 78 percent scored well nationally; its freshman retention rate (89 percent) and alumni giving rate (39 percent) were also among the highest in the Midwest. Taylor also placed well in the percentage of full-time faculty (88 percent) and freshman students from the upper 25 percent of their respective classes (69 percent).

The Admissions Office wants to make sure that those stories you tell about your Taylor days continue being told by the next generation.

Go Online to http://www.taylor.edu/alumnikids and register them to receive information or simply call the Admissions Office at 800.882.3456 and we will take that information personally.

Taylor Admissions is open for visits Monday – Friday and Saturday mornings. Feel free to schedule an appointment at your convenience, or come to campus for an official Campus Visitation Day.
Fall is a busy time of the year, especially in Upland, Ind. The usually quiet town floods with people for the annual Labor Day Festival. Perhaps most intriguing is the town rummage sale with around 150 homes participating. Shoppers flock from surrounding areas to search for the best pre-owned deals. Students love furnishing their dorm rooms with the treasures they find. But you'd better get out early. The best sales are usually sold out by 8:00 a.m. Even in Upland, the early bird gets the worm.

The highlight of the weekend, though, is the Labor Day parade. Half of the town marches down Main Street while the other half sits as spectators on the sidewalks. The children of the town carry their weight home in sweets. Rumor has it that the cavity rate increases shortly after.

Speaking of sweets, you can't forget the all-you-can-eat pancake breakfast. Those pastries are so good, even Aunt Jemima can't compete.

There's also the truck and tractor pull, mud races, ice cream social and rodeo. The Lions Club grandstands can't hold all the excited spectators.

You never know what deals you may find at the garage sales, but one thing's for sure—you can always count on friendly folks with warm smiles and great bargains.
Did you know that 60% of Americans have no will?

A DREAM COME TRUE

Although you may not aspire to work with the President one day, it's nice to know that it's possible with a Taylor education. Because at Taylor, you don't have to compromise your Christian faith for academic excellence. All you need to do is decide your dream after you graduate.

Taylor University extends warm congratulations to Stephen Johnson '73 on his appointment as the administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.
