Vol. 51, No. 1

Issued monthly. Entered as second class matter at Upland, Indiana, April 8, 1900, under Act of Congress July 16, 1894.

TAYLOR . . .

Taylor University has a history that began in 1846. Today this Christian college reflects the prayers and faith that have sustained her through more than a century of service, until she now stands as a fully accredited, co-educational, independent liberal arts institution with a program that is effectively Christian.

These things were left to us..a cane...

Bishop William Taylor, Pioneer Bishop of the Methodist Church, a namesake of Taylor University, left these behind which have become tradition upon campus. When viewed by themselves as part of a life that reached around the world, they seem rather insignificant; but as part of Taylor's tradition, they stand as a symbol of this great man who so perfectly embodied the spirit and genius of the Taylor program.

The cane, now more properly referred to as the mace, was sent to the college some years after Bishop Taylor was on campus. It was cut by him in South America and used throughout his extensive missionary work in that country.

Today the mace is carried at the head of all academic processions on the campus.

a cornerstone . . . a challenge

Bishop Taylor was on campus to lay this cornerstone in 1893. Today H. Maria Wright Hall houses the administrative offices, the Walker Museum, classrooms, the chemistry laboratories, and the art and speech departments.

The new men's dormitory aptly symbolizes a challenge toward greater achievements of future Christian Higher Education.

Daily devotions are a vital part of the student's day at Taylor.

Chapel worship provides a refreshing spiritual experience in the midst of a busy morning's schedule.

A Christian atmosphere

The spiritual heritage received from this pioneer Bishop is best exemplified in his words, "this work is of God." This statement set a pattern for over a century of Christian Higher Education upon Taylor's Campus. Her graduates have trained for fields of service both at home and abroad. Taylor University continues to answer the heritage of Bishop Taylor with this motto, "Since 1846 . . . Effectively Christian."

Taylor's campus

The Ayres-Alumni Memorial Library provides adequate space and facilities for 45,000 volumes, a record library, audio-visual aids, class rooms, and reading rooms.

a place of many moods

The cheering of fans at a football game, the gay laughter from the dormitory bull-session, the swelling of music from a campus choral group, the hushed talk of a couple on an evening stroll and the serenity of a prayer time in the chapel dramatically present a well balanced life at Taylor. These sounds, with many others to supplement them, exemplify the various moods of a college campus.

Taylor's program

Small classes, such as this botany class, make education more individualized.

educationally unique

An unusual educational experience is in store for the students who become members of the Taylor Campus Community. They will work, study, play and worship with students from 32 states, 34 denominations and 9 foreign countries. They will by consent agree to refrain from smoking, dancing and the use of alcoholic beverages while they are members of the Taylor Family. This unique fellowship and the spiritual environment offer every opportunity to grow mentally and spiritually.

A well-equipped, well-managed library, a necessity to good education, is provided in the Ayres-Alumni Library.

Students in the modern language department have opportunity to use this fine language laboratory.

The professors

The faculty at Taylor serve far beyond the demands of the average college professor. Their work has only begun when they take their places in the classroom. Beyond the hours of instruction and grading lie the many opportunities to counsel with the young men and women who come under their influence. Many times the problems are academic, but very frequently they involve spiritual factors that call for prayer as well as guidance. This intimate relationship between faculty and students is a vital part of the educational experience at Taylor.

Training at Taylor

The sciences are a background for many fields.

Student teaching, fine arts and home economics provide interesting laboratory experience.

in a variety of fields

Through training at Taylor it is possible to receive either the Bachelor of Arts or the Bachelor of Science in Education degrees. Pre-professional courses are available in law, nursing, engineering, and medicine, in affiliation with Indiana and Purdue Universities. A five-year missionary course is also offered.

Taylor produces both a radio and a television program which provide experience through various fields in these media.

Athletics provide practical knowledge for coaches-to-be.
