How To Get Where You're Going

by Bob Kirby

"I don't want your sacrifices—I want your love; I don't want your offerings—I want you to know me." (Hosea 6:6) This verse contains all the principles man will ever need in establishing the priorities of life. God is saying love me, get to know me, obey me. Fenelon in Spiritual Letters puts it this way: "God is, at the same time, the Truth and the Love. We can only know the truth in proportion as we love—when we love it, we understand it well."

In an age when days are precious and hours seem far too short, we have become so efficient that we've failed to see just how essential getting to know God better and better really is. Stop and think of the "many people who would never knowingly 'throw away their lives,' yet are willing to let life slip through their hands in little pieces just because they have not decided what are the important things in life." (Keith Miller) Charles Hummel, a Christian author, claims that a Christian's greatest danger in life is "letting the urgent things crowd out the important." What a great temptation this is for most students here at FWBC. How many times do we "just get by" on homework assignments, because we watched TV too long or because we were involved in a bull session that lasted for hours. And then in the very same breath, we say the reason we chose to attend B.C. was because the courses here are geared to produce spiritual growth in the students. We've created a paradox for ourselves. Could this paradox be the result of losing sight of God's perspectives? "Although there were many needs in the lives of those around Him, yet when Christ came to the cross of Calvary, He could say to His heavenly Father, 'I have finished the work you gave me to do.' Christ operated on the basis of what was important rather than on the urgencies imposed on His life. It is not that our involvement in activities is wrong; rather it is that our allowing our involvement to interfere with or take priority over our relationship with God is wrong.

One of the ways Satan has deceived well-meaning Christians is to convince them that God is primarily concerned that we are working, producing, and accomplishing. Most of us get so wrapped up in the "doing" aspect of the Christian life that we sadly neglect the "being." If we could only step off a treadmill of activity long enough to evaluate our lives in light of what God considers important, we might be shocked with our conclusions!

God says, "Be still and know that I am God." (Ps. 46:10) But to a healthy college student, "being still" before God sounds like Dullsville personified. It is much easier to study about God, or to witness for God, or to give to God than it is to stop the activity long enough to learn to know God Himself.

God also says, "you shall find me when you search for me with all your heart." (Deut. 4:29) But for most of us by the time we get done with all of the urgent activities which make up our days, there just isn't enough time to really search for God. Our time with Him is either forfeited altogether or at best, hurried. What it really boils down to is that we are so busy getting educated to serve God that we cannot be bothered with building a relationship with God. The situation is rather like the story of the husband who loved his wife so much that he couldn't do enough for her. He worked two jobs in order to get enough money to buy her expensive clothes, a lovely home and all the trinkets his loving heart could dream up. The tragedy is that his wife divorced him because she was lonely! She did not want just the evidences of his love, i. e. his gifts; she simply wanted him.

Our top priority in life is not being on 59 committees so people will think we are really where it's at spiritually but simply to get to know God better and better. This is exactly what II Peter 1:5-8 tells us to do. "You need more than faith; you must also work hard to be good, and even that is not enough. For then you must learn to know God better and discover what he wants you to do. Next, learn to put aside your own desires so that you will become patient and godly, gladly letting God have his way with you. This will make possible the next step, which is for you to enjoy other people and to like them, and finally you will grow to love them deeply. The more you go on in this way, the more you will grow strong spiritually and become fruitful and useful to our Lord Jesus Christ."

As we concentrate our efforts on building a relationship of love and confidence in our Lord, the result will be obedient, productive lives. And when we are finished with our Bible College training, we will have much more than knowledge and skills to offer the world—we will present to them our own best Friend, the Lord Jesus Christ.

Taking A Look At Ourselves

by Bill Willis

The administration is studying! The faculty is studying! They are doing a self study in preparation for the coming of an examining team sent by the American Association of Bible Colleges by whom we are accredited. Every ten years our school is reevaluated by the AABC and they rely heavily on our own self-study evaluation.

The first Bible College in the United States was founded in 1882. Today there are nearly 200 Bible Colleges with over 30,000 students enrolled. The AABC was established in 1947 for improvement of the Biblical and church vocational programs provided by these schools. All Bible colleges are not members as membership is voluntary and the standards are high.

What will the examining team look for? According to Dr. Robert Hughes, chairman of the self study, they will want to see if we are doing in the best way possible what we say we are doing. Consequently, they will be looking into every part of our school program and organization from cooks to Christian Education, annuals to alumni, the Board to the basement, Student Services to Student Association. They will be looking for both our strengths and weaknesses.

Who is actually doing the self study? Every staff member of Fort Wayne Bible College will be involved along with other key persons. Every department will analyze its own area of responsibilities and produce a written report. The reports are compiled, edited into one large volume, and copies are sent to the AABC for their study and pre-evaluation.

Dr. Robert Hughes, chairman of the self study, brings helpful experience to his position. Being Chairman of the Division of General Studies and a member of the Committee on Administration, he knows FWBC well. He has also participated in a self study at Kansas City Bible College, where he served as acting dean.

When will all this take place? Actually, committees were formed during the faculty retreat held last fall. The self study is well under way and is to be completed during the 1973-74 school year. The examining team will be here early in 1975.

How will this affect the students? Will they be aware all this is going on? Again, according to Dr. Hughes, student leaders will certainly be aware of the self study for they will also be involved. Every student organization will be submitting a report crystalizing its goals and objectives and saying how well it feels it is meeting student needs. There are also plans for a teacher evaluation similar to the one students participated in two years ago.

Asked how Fort Wayne Bible College ranks with the other schools in the AABC, Dr. Hughes remarked that "among Bible colleges in the United States, FWBC is considered one of the tops." He recounted that from our school have come some of the leading educators in the Bible college movement: Dr. S. A. Witmer was Executive Director of the AABC; Dr. Jared F. Gerig was President of the AABC; Drs. Edward and Francis Simpson and our president, Dr. Timothy Warner, are presently on the Research Commission; Dr. Forest Weddle is on the Committee on Bible Testing; and Dr. Wesley Gerig is president of the AABC Delta Epsilon Chi Honor Society.

A self study well done is a difficult and time-consuming project. It is difficult to honestly analyze one's own strengths and weaknesses. As Dr. Hughes put it, "It is painful, but it is stimulating." Our administration deserves our respect for their willingness to do the difficult in order to do their job more efficiently and to serve us better.

Above: Miss Weddle attends to business as usual in her cold office on Witmer's north side.

"BRR! My radiator's not working!"

"If you're headed for W-10, leave your coat on!"

"Am I glad I have an electric blanket!"

Do these lines sound familiar? Did the lowered thermostats get to your bones too?

The energy crisis is not that the world is running out of resources, but that the demand for fuels is higher, thus taking the sources that are available.

This problem that is affecting the entire world is also affecting our college.

Many of us have felt the changes in the lowering of the thermostats. According to Ed Reynolds, of the Physical Plant Department, the thermostats are set at 68 degrees in hallways and classrooms, 65 degrees in rest rooms and 70 degrees in the dorms. During vacation period, and on weekends for Witmer Hall, the thermostats will be turned down or nearly off. The major problem the plant department will be confronted with will be controlling the heat. The heating systems are designed to hold the temperature at 72 degrees.

In the Financial Department, the new cost for fuel oil will be the greatest concern. Since September 1973, the cost has almost doubled from 17¢ per gallon to 31.4¢ per gallon. Revision of the '73-74 budget depends on the severity of the effects of the crisis. The college hopes to avoid raising tuition costs to cover the budget. Some means to avoid expenses under consideration are 1) using only certain classrooms for classes and not heating the rooms that aren't used, and 2) taking out every other light wherever possible.

Besides heating and financial problems, transportation is another concern. The Christian Service Department might have to cancel some singing tours, depending on the issue of rationing gas. Dick Baxter said that steps most likely to be taken would concern limiting the distance rather than the frequency of the tours.

Commuting students are also concerned about traveling. Eldon Krider, who makes a 140 mile round trip to attend classes, plans to enroll in correspondence courses during the spring semester. Others who live closer, have planned their schedules so that once they're here, they have consecutive classes until they go home.

The Vine asked Dr. Weddle if the energy crisis was related to any prophecy concerning the end times. He said that this is one of Satan's ways to bring confusion into the world. "Satan is creating this situation, which will, of course, culminate in the need for the Anti-Christ to straighten it out." He pointed out "it's leading to the Anti-Christ and Armageddon," using Zech. 14.2 and the fact that the energy crisis concerns the whole world.

In a statement to The Vine, Dr. Warner asked that we "demonstrate a Christian attitude to this problem as good citizens and attempt to cooperate as fully as possible."

The Crisis is with us and will be for some time. There are things we can't do, and things we shouldn't do as our part of the solution. Let's be Christ-like and "obey the government, for God is the one who has put it there" (Rom. 13:1, Living Bible).

Christmas Was . . .

In the midst of taking final exams, buying presents for roommates and family, getting plane tickets, and decorating the dorm rooms, Christmas came—and so did two feet of unexpected snow.

Several weeks prior to semester's end our Christmas festivities began. On December 9, we were inspired by listening to the annual performance of Handel's Messiah.

On December 14 we had the BC-family Christmas dinner with the theme "Christmas Is . . ." Afterwards, in one of the most varied and enjoyable programs ever given at the college, all the campus musical groups participated, concluding with the familiar "Oh, Christmas Tree." Interspersed throughout the program were games and skits which drew in students and faculty.

Urbana Stresses Lordship Of Christ

“What is the major reason why evangelical Christians believe that the Bible is God’s Word written, inspired by His Spirit and authoritative over their lives? It is certainly not that we take a blindfold leap into the darkness and resolve to believe what we strongly suspect is incredible. Nor is it because the universal church consistently taught this for the first 18 centuries of its life (though it did, and this long tradition is not to be lightly set aside). Nor is it because of God’s Word authenticates itself to us as we read it today—by the majesty of its themes, by the unity of its message, and by the power of its influence. No. The overriding reason for accepting the devine inspiration and authority of Scripture is plain loyalty to Jesus. . .

“The central issue relates, therefore, not to the authority of the Bible, but to the authority of Christ. . . To reject the authority of either the Old Testament or the New Testament is to reject the authority of Christ. It is supremely because we are determined to submit to the authority of Jesus Christ as Lord that we submit to the authority of Scripture.”

John R. W. Stott

“When people tell me my Christian hope is unrealistic, I tell them the trouble is not with my hope but with their reality. Their reality is too small. They are so petrified by the present that they forget the past and the future. They are so busy looking at the world that they never look up to see God. Of course, in that kind of world there is no hope. But one of the most important lessons in the whole Bible is that hope . . . is tied to a person, Jesus Christ . . . However the world may end, it ends with Christ’s victory for man, and not with man’s annihilation of man. It ends with hope, and that is not an end.”

Samuel Moffett

“Missionaries . . . looked on other cultures as aberrations and their own as the norm. A factor which contributed to this is the fact that many Americans refer to their country as a “Christian nation” and the Third World as “heathen countries.” The error in this kind of thinking is self-evident . . .

“One cannot witness to people outside their own cultural context. The very nature of the Gospel does not lend itself to this kind of narrowness because the Gospel has to do with all aspects of life.

“Because a lack of appreciation of foreign cultures comes from one’s home background, a necessary qualification for missionary work is, therefore, a love and appreciation of one’s own culture demonstrated by involvement in it. A Christian who has a lively interest in history, economics, politics, music, art, and literature will appreciate the same things in other cultures . . .

“I have difficulty believing the sincerity of a man who has no concern at all for the Afro-Americans, Chicanos, Indians, and Chinese here in America but who will cross oceans to love these same people in other parts of the world. The English say, ‘Charity begins at home.’ ”

Pius Wakatama

“What is the place of women in world missions? Jesus said, “You are my witnesses. You are the salt of the earth. You are the light of the world.” And there have been countless thousands who, without reference to where they came from or what they knew or who they were, have believed Jesus meant what He said and have followed.

“Today, strident female voices are raised to remind us, shrilly and ad nauseum, that women are equal with men. But such a question has never even arisen in connection with the history of Christian missions. In fact, for many years, far from being excluded, women constituted the majority among foreign missionaries . . .

“And it is the Lord of the Universe who calls you—you women, you men—and offers you today a place in His program. Your education or lack of it, your tastes and prejudices and fears and ambitions, your age or sex or color or height or marital status or income bracket are all things which may be offered to God, after you’ve presented your bodies as a living sacrifice. And God knows exactly what to do with them.”

Elisabeth Howard Elliot Leitch

Metamorphosis: An Interior Monologue

DECEMBER, 1973

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 27, 2:00 P.M.

Good grief! What am I doing here? Lord, you know I hate crowds. With these 15,000 people I feel like I'm going to be climbing the walls any minute now. This registration line is absolutely ridiculous; I've already stood in line for two hours.

I must have been crazy to let those SMF people talk me into coming here. I'm not even interested in missions as a future. All I wanted to do was find out what's happening in the world today. I'm not sure it's worth all this. There's nothing I can do about it now, so I might as well make the most of it.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 27, 10:00 P.M.

John W. Alexander sure hit me right between the eyes in his evening presentation. "The question," he said, "is not just 'Why are we here at Urbana?' but 'Why am I here?'" I wanted to see a lot of my friends from other schools whom I may never see again. I wanted to hear John Stott in person. I wanted to find out what's going on in the world—especially in China. I don't know anything about missions, but I suppose it wouldn't hurt to be familiar with the various mission boards at least.

Now I can see why Marcia would want to come: she's a missions major. She could talk to all these mission boards, learn their policies and what type of postgraduate training they recommend. And as far as being able to talk with missionaries first hand, they're all over the place!

This computerized Interchristo form really is interesting. Feed into a computer all your data and find what area of the world and through which mission boards you could serve. It makes you feel kind of needed and useful. There are so many specialized to fill, too. One girl had a degree in dietetics and there were a couple places where she could serve.

Tomorrow afternoon instead of going to the open seminars with all the various speakers, I think I'll go to the Armory and see if I can locate all the mission boards on my Interchristo sheet. Sure hope I can find them all among the 140 booths set up in here.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 28, 9:15 A.M.

Boy, that Bible study this morning wasn't half bad. Those kids in the group sure did know a lot about the Bible for not going to a Bible college. I think some of them even knew as much as I did. Guess that doesn't say a whole lot for me. Well, kid, let this be an inspiration to you to get on the stick.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 30, 2:00 P.M.

These last couple of days of the convention have my head swimming. These speakers have said some things that I never even thought about. Elisabeth Elliott Leicht said not to let the image of missions hold you back.

Pius Wakatama sure did have a lot of good things to say. Too bad I missed him at Missions Conference at BC. But I'll bet a lot of people were surprised when he said that love and appreciation of one's own culture brings ability for a person to appreciate another culture. He said that many think of evangelism as the positive and social concern as the negative. Yet to have light, both the positive and negative are required.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 1, 8:00 A.M.

I can't believe that Urbana '73 is over already. I was just getting used to having 15,000 people around, instead of the 500 at BC. There were a lot of sharp kids here. It is encouraging to see that there are so many Christian guys here. It makes you think again about the possibility of missions for you. So, I've been to Urbana '73. What is there to do now after all the excitement has died down? Weatherspoon gave a whole list of things I could do, like help my church; go with summer missions; move to a different geographical location, like from rural to urban, to see how the rest of America lives; cut out clippings of specific current events to keep informed and to be able to pray more intelligently; write to missionaries; find out about mission boards; read books. Those are things I can do now.

I guess the only way to see the fulfillment of the theme of the convention, "Jesus Christ: Lord of the Universe, Hope of the World," is to first allow Jesus Christ to become "Lord of my life." It has to begin with me.

by Sue Boyer

The above is a hypothetical monologue. Miss Boyer is a senior with majors in Christian Education and Missions.

Dear Mom and Dad,
I just got back to the dorm, and I decided I had to write and tell about the great week that the school has had.

This week has been Spiritual Emphasis Week. The speaker was Dr. Kenneth Gangel, head of the department at Trinity Seminary. He spoke on the Christian family during eight sessions, four day and four night meetings, plus various seminars during the day.

This man is super. I think he hit the bull's eye when he started to talk about Christian love relationships. Sometimes we as Christians forget about a genuine love for fellow Christians. He explained how we should begin to look for the kind of love that Paul talks about. 1 Corinthians 13 hit home during those sessions.

After the session on love, my wing talked about it till 3 a.m.! It was great. I can really feel the new kind of love that we can now show towards one another. We have learned to share & have now established wing devotions. Not only has he helped the single student, but he has also shown dating and married students things that can help them grow spiritually with each other. He had seminars during the day with them, and from what I heard, the seminars were fantastic. One day he talked about the duties of a husband and wife towards each other. You would have really enjoyed it, especially the pictures that accompanied the lecture.

Friday we had an informal gathering at First Church. It was a great time of sharing & testimonies. Dr. Gangel is so personal. He must have a great wife and family. He shared stories from his home, & you can tell that they have a real love towards each other. Well, it's getting late. Give my love to all. I can hardly wait to get home and share more of his ideas with you.

Love, me

Aid For The $1.6 Million Headache . . .

Building Witmer Hall, the Bible College's million-dollar administration-classroom facility, put Fort Wayne Bible College into debt amounting to approximately 1.6 million dollars. Four years have passed and the college has not yet been able to reduce the 1.6 million dollar debt.

Each week the college pays $2000 in interest on the various loans it took out to build Witmer Hall. That $100,000 the college pays out in interest alone is ten percent of the total college budget. If there were a possibility of raising $500,000 or even $50,000 to apply toward the reduction of the Witmer Hall debt, the college could pay some of the loans in full and free funds for other projects.

These facts are all background for the story which began one warm Saturday night in September of 1973, when a pastor approached Student Association President, Dennis Barta, with a project idea.

"Why," asked the pastor, "should the student body content itself with raising two to three thousand dollars for decorating the Student Union or some other project? Why couldn't the student body covenant with God to raise $300,000 or even $500,000 to help erase the debt on Witmer Hall?"

The seemingly impossible challenge which the pastor was presenting was no spur-of-the-moment idea. This man had held a vision for over two years, prayed over it, and even cried over it. He could see potential being allowed to remain undeveloped simply because the Bible College had to pay out $100,000 each year as interest instead of being able to invest that money in expanding facilities, developing better curricula, raising staff salaries, giving additional financial aid to students.

The immediate question was how a student body of 500 could raise $500,000 when many students had difficulty in even paying off their school bills. The means would not be easy, but it was possible.

The plan was simple. Each student would personally write at least twenty letters to family members, friends, government officials, or anyone else whose name came into his mind. In these letters students would request a tax-deductible gift of $100 for the Witmer Hall debt liquidation project. In addition to writing, students would volunteer to work where possible. And above all, they would pray, trusting God to supply funds.

After weeks of prayer, preparation, and frustration, the work began. Some students chose not to participate, but hundreds of letters did go out. A few students wrote thirty, forty, or even fifty letters.

The faculty and administration, pleased observers of the entirely student-conducted project, cancelled morning classes for one day so students could write letters without the pressures of classes and homework. Weeks after "letter writing day" Student Association was getting questions from students who wanted to know if they could still write some letters. And so, the campaign continued on into the spring semester.

Responses came from all over the United States, from believers and non-believers, from Sunday School classes, churches, students, businesses, corporations. One contributor commented "Your approach is just unique and different enough to cause me to want to contribute to your project. Good luck on your goal!" Another wrote, "I certainly congratulate you and the rest of the students for your dedication and for the belief you have in your school."

As some students worked and prayed together in this effort to express their appreciation to the college for its influence in their lives, a greater sense of unity developed among them. Also the project has brought about an increase in these students' faith as they see the message of Matthew 19:26 demonstrated: "With man this is impossible, but with God all things are possible."

Bulletin: $17,600 came in for the Debt Reduction Project by February 20.

Third Floor Fights For You

by Violet Miyasato

"Visiting between sexes . . . in halls and in the dining hall is not permitted . . ."

"Blue jeans and T-shirts are reserved for work or recreation only."

"Dress and skirt lengths should come at least to the top of the kneecap."

Funny? It wouldn't have been if you were a student a few years ago. Miss Joy Gerig recalls some girlfriends being campused and losing all social privileges for two weeks: they wore blue jeans to South Campus to play softball. But the following fall semester brought blue jeans-privileges for girls. Mr. Birkey remembers the years that "visiting between sexes in the dining hall was not permitted" and segregated mealtimes were part of life at B.C. Well times have changed and rules have changed. But has the department that disciplines changed?

Yes it has. The staff has worked hard to change the emphasis of the department. The change in philosophy emphasizes the positive and uses a redemptive approach to discipline. Any disciplinary action strives to be corrective and helpful, not merely punitive. Miss Gerig, from her vantage point outside the department, says "One of Student Services major goals is to aid our students to develop their total person . . . who they are, what their abilities are, and how to relate to people . . . goals that coincide completely with Christ's command that we are to love the Lord our God with all our heart, mind, soul, body, and spirit; and our neighbor as ourself. I think this is a very positive aspect of Student Services that's making a beautiful contribution to our student body."

At one time this department was called Office of the Dean of Students. But with the change in emphasis has come also a change in name. The heart of Student Services is service to the students as the name suggests. In the words of Max Wanner, "It is a branch on the administrative level, assigned the task of relating to the students and trying to serve them and meet their needs." Student Services along with a host of other things plans Orientation Week, works on the activities schedule, insurance and medical benefits, and will even help students find a good dentist.

Student Services is a department of people who care. Each person "up there on third floor" plays a vital part in helping students. From director to secretary, all are encouraged to be themselves and share opinions, joys, and sorrows. They are genuine people, concerned about the students and really seeking to be of service to them. In the words of Dr. Gene Hovee, director, "this is the department that represents students to the faculty." It tries to understand the students' point of view.

CS Department Reports

Christian Service teams traveled about 6000 miles in the first semester, according to a report released by CS Director Joy Gerig.

The teams participated in 76 different services and programs as they shared their faith in music and testimonies.

Eighty-nine churches and organizations are cooperating with the CS program.

The Prayer Committee consists of E. Baird, B. Brown, H. Muller, M. Siebeck, J. Weaver, and Chairman Greg Hullinger.

Academic Dean Named

Wesley R. Willis was named Academic Dean effective January 1. Mr. Willis has been on the Christian Education faculty of Fort Wayne Bible College since 1971.

In addition to his new responsibilities as Dean, Mr. Willis will continue as Chairman of the Division of Professional Studies and head of the Audio-Visual Department.

Mr. Willis is working on a Ph. D. in the Philosophy of Education at the University of Notre Dame.

20 Go To Mexico

This year during Christmas break, 20 BC students went to General Teran, Mexico, for Christmas Missions. The trip, which lasted from December 20 until January 7, was for the purposes of literature distribution, ministering in churches, and construction of Sunday School rooms on an already-existing Evangelical Congregation Church.

Leading the team was Rick Alvis. Others who went were Bill Adams, Mark Campbell, Gary Culbertson, Mary Dominguez, Marcia Emerick, Evelyn Griffin, Shirley Griffith, Cathy Herdman, Randy Hess, Tim Hopkins, Ruth Jones, Shirley Kelsey, Mark Masterson, Mike Mihailoff, Carol Shuck, Ed Shuck, Tim Stair, and Denny Yoder.

Ethics Series Picks Up Key Issues

Notes On Integrity: Dr. Warner

To say “Everybody does it,” is to imply that there is no standard beyond social acceptability, but history testifies that social conscience unsupported by a concept of personal honor will always lead to a corrupt society.

Paul also warns that “when they measure themselves by one another . . . they are without understanding.” (II Cor. 10:12 RSV)

The problem begins with the deceitfulness of the human heart. Integrity begins when I acknowledge that I have the power of self-deception and begin to honestly test my life by God’s truth.

Christian integrity means not taking (bearing) the Lord’s name in vain (in an empty, meaningless way). My “yes” to Christ should be a complete “yes,” not just “yes” for salvation with no “yes” for His Lordship. My “no” to the world should be a complete “no,” not “no” to some of the obvious, big sins but with latitude for some things I’d at least like to try.

Socrates counselled that we should not fear death; we should fear unrighteousness. Jesus warned, “Do not fear those who can kill the body but cannot kill the soul; rather fear him that can destroy both soul and body in hell.” (Matt. 10:28)

There are times when I would be wrong in insisting on my rights, but I am never wrong when I do what is right even though those all around me do wrong or even when doing wrong would save my life.

Integrity is living by what is right regardless of the spectators or the consequences.

Notes on Prejudice: Mr. Beals

One source of prejudice is authoritarianism—taking the word of a respected source rather than finding out for ourselves. Another is our susceptibility to propaganda, especially in today’s multi-media age. We are also creatures of impulse and habit, and although we are often self-complementary of the rationality of our judgments, they are most often made on the visceral level. As Christians, we would concur that the origin of all prejudice is in the fallen nature of man.

We can best deal with prejudice by confessing as honestly as possible that we have prejudices. We have come by them largely unaware, but they are part of our makeup. One of my favorite philosophers lives in Georgia. His abode is the Okefenokee Swamp, and he is an ever-lovin’-blue-eyed ’possum that answers to the name Pogo. He once profoundly commented to a group of his peers, “we have met the enemy, and he is us.” Would we not admit that our greatest problem with prejudice is us? I realize that the grammar is wrong, but I think the emphasis is correct.

Most of all current and historical prejudices can be found in the Scripture. There was racial prejudice: Jews and Samaritans. There was geographical prejudice: Jesus was from Nazareth. There was labeling: the Paul party and the Apollos party at Corinth. Even in the early church there were problems between the Jewish and Gentile converts to Christianity.

What is the answer? We can begin by accepting others, and repenting of a non-accepting attitude. After all, if God can accept us, surely we can accept others. The Spirit of God cannot work effectively if we build barriers. We are called to love.

Serve The Lord With Gladness:

Music . . . one cannot imagine life without it. Music provides a medium for offering praise to God and presenting testimony of His faithfulness. As students' voices are raised in song, fears and difficulties become small and hearts are united in the faith. Music reaches into the lives of sinner and saint to present Christ to all.

They Did A Fine Job!

From Beginning To End

Pete Strubhar—The all-time leading scorer in FWBC history. One of the hardest workers I've ever coached. "Pistol Pete" is also an excellent defensive player, deserving of all the awards he has received.

Larry Lewis—Typifies the ball player a coach looks for when scouting. Winner of the Hustle-Sportsmanship award last year. Has done a tremendous job playing an unnatural position. His best years are still ahead of him.

Todd Habegger—A coach's delight! Works hard, and is showing improvement in all areas of his game. When he becomes aggressive, he is almost impossible to stop. Tremendous career ahead of him.

Coach's Comments

Bill Campbell—Last year's Most-Improved Player, Bill has picked up this year where he left off last year. Strong offensive threat, and has become a tough defensive player. Improving on the boards. Senior year should be his best.

Bob Batson—A leading candidate for most improved player award for this year. "Boomer" has improved in every phase of the game. Has drawn many charging fouls this year. He is continuing to become an offensive threat, and is beginning to make his size felt under the boards.

Dan McMillan—Dan has worked hard to make himself the valuable "sixth player" of the 73-74 Falcons. Does a fine job of scoring and boarding. Needs to gain confidence in ball handling. His defense is showing steady improvement. Next year will be a good one because of experience gained this year.

Greg Ponchot—Has turned in some big pinch hit roles. Steadily gaining confidence in his whole game. Lack of experience has hurt him, but he has shown a willingness to work hard. Only a freshman, he will see a lot of playing time at FWBC.

Carl White—Another freshman, Carl is beginning to show the potential that was anticipated this year. Tends to be too timid. When aggressive he can do the job. Needs to work on his defense. Has shown a real desire to improve whole game. An important member of the Falcons as team comedian. Keeps us all loose.

Play to win!

Don Phillips—Lack of experience has really hurt him, but has shown a positive attitude towards hard work. Has good speed and quickness and will be tough when he puts it all together. "Flipper" will be heard from in his future years at FWBC.

Dave Getz—Dave has had the least experience of any of the Falcons, but he is not short on desire. Needs to keep alert at all times. Has shown improvement in all phases of the game. Future depends on hard work to make up for lack of experience.

"Nice day, but not the way I planned it."

"And now for our next victims."

Above: "Yes, go on. I am listening."

JESUS IS LORD

HE IS THE KING OF KINGS,
HE IS THE LORD OF LORDS:
JESUS, THE NAME ABOVE EVERY NAME.
HE IS THE SONG OF SONGS,
TO HIM OUR PRAISE BELONGS,
HE IS THE WAY, HE IS THE TRUTH,
HE IS THE LIFE.

HE IS THE KING OF KINGS,
HE IS THE LORD OF LORDS,
HE IS THE COMING KING OF THE EARTH
JESUS WILL REIGN SOME DAY AND EVERY TONGUE SHALL SAY:
JESUS IS LORD, JESUS IS LORD, JESUS IS LORD OF LORDS!
