Taylor Awarded Grants from Atomic Energy Commission for Research, Isotope Training

Dr. Elmer Nussbaum (right), Professor of Physics, and research assistant Joe Brain, a junior from Wayne, New Jersey, study development of rats to be used in the radioisotope training program.

Taylor University has been awarded a contract by the Atomic Energy Commission's Division of Biology and Medicine for continuation of research already in progress.

The award, totaling $6,856, is for a period of one year, and will be used to purchase necessary scientific equipment and to provide for the services of qualified personnel. The title of the contract is, "The Diffusion of Radon through Semi-permeable Membranes."

The research program was established at Taylor over a year ago through an initial grant of $7,500 from the A. E. C.

ENROLLMENT GAIN SEEN FOR FALL SEMESTER

Student pre-registrations and acceptances for this fall show an increase over last year, according to figures released by E. Sterl Phinney, Registrar and Director of Admissions.

Pre-registrations through July 31 totaled 422, compared with 391 for the same period last year. The number of new students accepted for fall was 307, making a total of 729. Total accepted and pre-registered for the same period last year was 707.

Women hold a considerable edge in numbers to date, with 382 pre-registrations and acceptances, compared with 347 men.

The enrollment goal for this academic year is 750, which represents the capacity of present housing facilities. Registration will be held September 17 and 18 and classes will begin September 21.

Taylor also has received from the Atomic Energy Commission a supplemental grant of $3,465.

The grant is part of AEC's program of assistance in equipping college and university laboratories for training in nuclear technology as applied to the life sciences. The amount awarded to Taylor is in addition to a similar grant of $8,000 received in March, 1958.

The additional grant will permit increased student participation in the training program and will make possible the utilization of nuclear equipment in certain biology, chemistry and physics courses not previously included in the program. It also provides equipment and training aids which may be used in special adult education classes.

Additional radionuclides (radioactive elements) available for experiments will include Carbon-14, Cobalt-60 and Zinc-65. Experiments in column and paper chromatography are being added in biology and chemistry. The course in physical electronics will now have equipment for the study of special scaling circuits used in radiation instruments.

The purpose of the grants is to help colleges and universities expand their facilities for training in radiation biology and in the use of radioisotopes in the fields of agriculture, veterinary medicine, medicine and pharmacy, public health and biology.

(The training program at Taylor was a subject of a report in the June issue of the Bulletin of the American Institute of Biological Sciences: "An Undergraduate Program in Nuclear Technology as Related to the Life Sciences")

VENTURE FOR VICTORY TEAM WELL RECEIVED IN ORIENT

The Venture for Victory team, mid-way through their summer tour of the Orient, reported that 175,000 spectators had witnessed their games, and heard their half-time messages.

They had won 43 consecutive games, with approximately 30 contests remaining. They also indicated that 3000 had stayed after the games for decision meetings.

LIBRARY STAFF SEEKS GIFTS OF BOOKS, PRIVATE LIBRARIES

The college library welcomes funds designated to purchase books. Some may prefer a more direct gift, wishing to choose the books themselves. In this case, Miss Alice K. Holcombe, head librarian, recommends the choice of current or pertinent books.

Private libraries are received occasionally, with the understanding that duplicate copies may be sold. Books thus made available enable our students to build their own libraries. Proceeds then go for the purchase of new books. Gifts of professional journals are also desired.

When carefully chosen, books provide suitable memorials. When books are given in memory of a friend, a book plate indicating the memorial is placed in each volume.

Dr. Evan H. Bergwall is presented with a gift by Dr. Milo A. Rediger, on behalf of the Taylor faculty and staff, during farewell ceremonies held in honor of the Bergwalls on May 18.
