The Mysterium Cosmographicum—Johannes Kepler’s first attempt to find harmony in the universe—is represented above by a newly developed technique called a single image random-dot stereogram.

To view the stereogram, hold the page 1-2 feet in front of you and look at the suns in the center. Relax your gaze and allow the suns to drift out of focus. Each eye should see two suns, for a total of four. Bring your attention to the middle two so that they come together and fuse into a single sun. Maintain your gaze. After a while, you will begin to perceive depth in the picture.

Stereogram technique developed by Dan Dyckman.
