Taylor Receives Second Atomic Research Grant

Dr. Elmer Nussbaum is shown in new research laboratory demonstrating a portable Geiger Counter to Dr. Norvel Rich, Decatur, Indiana Physician, on Alumni Day, June 6.

Taylor University has been awarded a research contract from the Atomic Energy Commission. The grant, totaling $7500, is the second awarded to Taylor this spring by the division of Biology and Medicine of the A. E. C.

Research under the new contract will continue for one year, according to Dr. Elmer Nussbaum, Professor of Physics, who will direct the research.

Funds are provided by the A. E. C. to purchase necessary scientific equipment and to provide for the services of qualified personnel to work on the project. A part-time junior investigator and student laboratory assistants will participate with Nussbaum in the investigation.

Experiments will be conducted to determine the diffusion rate of radon through semi-permeable materials. This information will enable scientists to better measure the amount of radon, or other radioactive gases, which may pass through certain rubber products such as gas masks, laboratory apparatus, and connecting hoses. Certain equipment modifications may result from the investigations. Substances are being sought, similar to rubber, neoprene and some of the plastics, which will provide the most effective barrier to radon and other gases.

Radon is a radioactive gas present in mines, in uranium and radium industries, and in some laboratory installations. Appropriate safety measures are necessary to keep radon concentration in mine and factory atmospheres at levels which are considered safe for operating personnel.

112th Commencement Rites Feature President's Pastor

Dr. Edward L. R. Elson, Pastor of the National Presbyterian Church and Minister to President Dwight D. Eisenhower delivered the 112th annual commencement address at the graduation exercises, June 7, 1958.

Addressing the 128 graduating seniors and a capacity audience in Maytag Gymnasium on the subject, “Freedom Is Not Free,” Dr. Elson said the issues of our time turn on the kind of men and women we are.

“That is why colleges and universities such as Taylor are imperative in this hour, and that is why it is well for us to turn again to the renewal of our foundations.”

Freedom is costly, the noted churchman emphasized. Freedom brings with it deep loyalties. Freedom demands discipline. Freedom requires personal responsibility. It is time to be intolerant of that cheap conception of freedom which says that we can do as we please.

KRESGE FOUNDATION OFFERS $25,000 MATCHING GIFT

Taylor University has received a matching gift proposal from the Kresge Foundation, President Evan H. Bergwall has announced.

Under the terms of the grant, the Kresge Foundation will present the college with the final $25,000 in the current drive to secure $185,000 for furnishings and for construction costs not included in the $800,000 loan from the Federal Government for the new Food Service Center and Men’s Dormitory. Total cost of the project is $785,000.

Approximately $120,000 was contributed to the college this past fiscal year which ended June 30. As soon as Taylor meets the conditions of the grant, the Kresge Foundation will present their gift of $25,000 to complete the furnishings campaign.

The college has until June 30, 1959 to secure the necessary balance to qualify for the $25,000 gift. Taylor hopes to become eligible for the Kresge funds by December 31, 1958.
