Bel Kaufman's

October 22, 23, 24, 25, 1987 October 29, 30, 31, November 1, 1987 Little Theatre Taylor University

PROGRAM NOTES: ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Bel Kaufman was born in Berlin, Germany, raised first in Russia, and came with her parents to the United States when she was twelve years old. She received her B. A. degree (magna cum laude) from Hunter College and her M. A. from Columbia University.

Kaufman taught for twenty years in New York high schools. She was also an instructor of English at the New School for Social Research and assistant professor of English at Borough of Manhattan Community College, both in New York City. She received a Doctor of Letters from Nasson College in 1965 and was admitted to the Hall of Fame at Hunter College of the city University of New York in 1973. In addition to teaching, Kaufman contributes to "Esquire", "Saturday Review" and other publications.

In 1962, Kaufman published a satirical anthology of staff directives, lesson plans and faculty memos entitled "From a Teacher's Wastebasket." She extended that work to novel length in "Up the Down Staircase." Published in 1965, "Staircase" became an immediate bestseller with 1,500,000 copies sold the first month. "Time" magazine called Kaufman's novel "easily the most popular novel about U.S. public schools in history" and it was awarded the "Paperback of the Year" award for fiction from the National Bestsellers Institute in 1966. "Staircase" was filmed by Warner Brothers in 1967 and dramatized by Christopher Sergel in 1969.

Kaufman's success with "Staircase" might well have been considered a family tradition. She had published a poem by age 7 and her mother, the daughter of famed Yiddish author Sholom Aleichem, wrote over 2000 short stories which are still popular among Russian-speaking people. In her family, Kaufman has said, "Everyone breathes, everyone writes."

"And gladly wolde he lerne, and gladly teche." Chaucer's "Clerke of Oxenford"
